ISLAND IS IN GRIP OF HURRICANE

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—The first news from storm-swept Jamaica, cut off from the rest of the world since last Saturday, was received to-day in a dispatch by way of Colon, Panama.

The dispatch gives but meagre details. It tells, however, that communication with the interior and neighboring islands is still impossible, and that the storm is still raging.

Further details are lacking. Until uninterrupted cable service can be established nothing can be learned as to the extent of the damage or the loss of life.

In the vicinity of Jamaica there are known to be a score or more of yachts, including the Nourmahal, on which Colonel John Jacob Astor is cruising.

To-day's dispatch from Jamaica was evidently gotten through with the greatest difficulty. The correspondent indicates that the transmission of details awaits only an opportunity to reopen cable service.

The dispatch is as follows:

"All of the land lines are down as the result of a storm that has swept this section.

"Communication with the interior and neighboring islands is impossible.

"Floods followed the wind storm and continue unabated."

The brief cable, although failing to give any details, shows that a hurricane of unprecedented severity is still sweeping over the island. It is thought it will be some time before communication with the island is re-established.

Reports received here to-day from Albany indicate that an earthquake may have shaken the island and may have superinduced the storm. The seismograph at the New York State Museum recorded earth movements, but although the movement appeared to be of distant origin, the exact distance could not be determined.

The direct West India company is attempting to restore cable connections, but such efforts have thus far failed. Tests made from the office at Halifax, N. S., indicate that the cables are all right, but that the land lines from Bells Bay, where the cable lands, to Kingston, ten miles away, are down. To-day's brief dispatch corroborates the opinion of the cable men.

WEATHER BUREAU AT WASHINGTON WAITS JAMAICA NEWS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—At the United States Weather Bureau to-day it was said that communication with Jamaica ceased last Saturday. Officials believe this is due to the fury of the widely reported hurricane which took place in the Caribbean Sea on that day. While an earthquake might account for the shutting off of all cable communications, yet the seismograph instrument in the bureau records no earthquake since Saturday except a very slight one yesterday and that at a distance of perhaps 10,000 miles from Washington.

The bureau is in receipt of no information as to what has happened at Jamaica in the way of a hurricane except that derived from the newspapers. At the office of the Western Union Company it was said that it was not until yesterday that the Washington office was notified that direct cable communication with Jamaica had been interrupted. All messages are accepted subject to delay.

MANTIR, THE GREEK TRIED FOR KILLING OF ANNIE MULLINS

2 MEN BADLY BURNED; FIRE LOSS $1,500

Harry Noble and William Estabrook were badly burned this afternoon in a fire, which destroyed the interior of the fifth floor of the new Sheffield apartment house at No. 304 Massachusetts avenue, between Columbus and Huntington avenues. An enormous crowd was attracted by the fire and Back Bay trolley traffic was blocked for a half hour.

Noble was taken to the City Hospital, where his life is in danger. Estabrook was treated at a nearby drug store and then went to his home, No. 628 Tremont street, where he is suffering great pain.

The men are partners of the firm of Estabrook & Noble, and were decorating the interior of one of the suites on the fifth floor. Noble stepped on a parlor match, which flared up and set fire to some varnish that was in a can nearby. In an instant the room was ablaze and the burning varnish spattered on Noble's clothes.

Estabrook tried to extinguish the flames that were enveloping his companion, and he, too, was burned. Noble then ran down the five flights of stairs and into the street, where some men hurried to his assistance and finally put the fire out.

The firemen had a hard battle on the fifth floor, where the blaze had spread rapidly along the newly painted walls and floors and consumed two suites. They finally extinguished it, with a loss of $1,500.

The lines of hose blocked the trolley tracks in Massachusetts avenue. The fire happened just when hundreds were going to a concert at Symphony Hall and they were caught in the blockade. Scores of automobiles, occupied by fashionably dressed people, were also held up.

MANTIR TELLS STORY OF MULLINS "THIRD DEGREE"

Greek Boy Accused of Cutting Girl's Throat Describes Ordeal with Police—Declares Innocence of Crime.

The famous police "third degree," the origin of which was attributed to former Inspector Byrnes of New York, and which forms the basis of one of the most successful plays of Augustus Thoma, was used upon James Mantir to induce him to confess the murder of Annie Mullins, according to his sworn story told on the witness stand in the East Cambridge court to-day, where he and Peter C. Delorey are on trial for the crime.

The actions of the police as described by the accused boy were such as Hugo Munsterberg, the Harvard professor, told about in cases where a person could be induced through hypnotic suggestion to confess to an untruth. But Mantir declared that he denied all the accusations made against him.

"Gordon (the police lieutenant) sat me down by a desk," swore the witness, "put my feet right between his, shoved a paper at me and asked me to read it. He showed a sweater at me and told me there was a bloodspot on it. Then when he couldn't find the blood spot he said I had cut the spot out of the sweater. Gordon kept hot and cold on me. He said that if I didn't say yes it would be worse for me. I said I couldn't lie. They brought me out again and again all night. I wanted a blanket, but they made me sleep on the floor, the first time I ever did that in my life."

Calling of Mantir a Surprise.

The action of placing Mantir on the stand as the first witness for the defence surprised the State. Various lawyers who had other business in and about the court house heard of it and flocked to the trial room. The unexpected move and the demeanor of the prisoner on the stand caused much comment.

Mantir denied that he killed Annie Mullins, as is charged. He said he was on the Delorey farm all of the night on which she was murdered. He heard first of the crime from Mrs. Delorey, he testified, who read it in a newspaper on Sunday, the day after the body was found.

There was great crading of necks as the handsome young Greek took the stand. The court room was filled. Many women were in the audience. In the room was an impressive silence as the accused boy, not yet out of his teens, walked from the steel cage and was sworn to tell his own story of his whereabouts on the evening of the shocking crime.

Mantir spoke clearly and in good English. He was not very fluent, but appeared to have a comprehensive knowledge of the tongue, which he went to in the home of Mrs. Elizabeth Delorey to study. He was unusually cool. His voice was well modulated. He gazed frankly at his interrogators and at the judges. He rested his hands on the railing in front of him at times.

Released From Steel Cage.

Attorney Winslow called Mantir's name at 9:35. One of the deputy sheriffs unlocked his iron cage. He stepped from

$1,000 OFFER TO FIND HEIR TO $100,000

A reward of $1,000 was offered to-day by Frederick Barlow, 3 Boston wool merchant, to anyone who will give him information that will lead to his finding his half-brother, James Corbett, formerly of Boston, who is one of three heirs to the $300,000 estate of William J. Corbett, a wealthy Philadelphia manufacturer. A figure "5" tattooed on the back of the missing man's right hand, together with the initials "J. C." on the same arm, are the sole means of identifying the man who has inherited $100,000, while he is tramping and working his way through the country.

While Frederick Barlow is bending every effort to locate his half-brother and give him $100,000, the latter is penniless. His life history is romantic.

Just twelve weeks ago James Corbett, the missing man, was seen in Boston, passing the corner of Kneeland and Lincoln streets, by John F. Fitzgerald, an old friend, who has a store there. Although the passing man had not seen his friend Fitzgerald for over a year, he did not stop to speak to him, but simply shouted, "Hello!" Then he disappeared in the direction of Washington street.

Hard to Get Clew.

Six weeks later, William J. Corbett died in Philadelphia, leaving an estate worth upward of $300,000. Frederick Barlow, the half brother, who was always been looked upon by the family as a keen business man, began a search. So far he has not been able to get any tangible clew, and until then the estate cannot be settled.

Search is being made for the missing man in New York, Chicago, San Francisco and through the Middle and Far West.

"I am determined to find my brother," said to-day I decided to offer a reward of $1,000 to anyone who will give me information that will lead to my finding him," said Mr. Barlow to-day.

"The last clew as to his whereabouts was given me by John F. Fitzgerald. I shall work until my brother is found. He has always been a soldier of fortune.

Seen in New York.

"I have just received information from Andrew Eagan, who is working for the contractors who are tearing down the Morris Park race track in New York, that my brother was recently working along the waterfront of New York City.

"He may have gone West or South, but I shall hunt until he is found.

"James Corbett is about sixty years old, weighs about 150 pounds, has gray eyes and is dark complexioned. When he was last seen he was without a moustache.

"The best means of identifying him is by the tattoo marks on his right arm. I have confidence that through the Hearst papers I may be able to get a trace of him."

"LA BELLE OTERO" ARRESTED IN PARIS

PARIS, Nov. 11.—"La Belle Otero," called the most beautiful dancer on the French stage, was arraigned in the police court to-day. She was arrested with fifty other women and ten men in a fashionable gambling den in the Boulevard des Italiens. The dancer was found hidding in a cupboard.

PARK SQ. SITE SOLD TO TRUST

The Park Square Real Estate Trust has bought the old Park Square Station and land from the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad. The purchase price is $5,200,000.

In payment for the land the trustees of the Park Square Real Estate Trust have issued to the New Haven road 52,000 shares of the Real Estate Trust of a nominal value of $100 each.

It is the intention of the trustees to split the property, improve it and dispose of it. None of the land will be offered for sale at present, however.

For development the trustees will issue net mortgage bonds for not exceeding $4,000,000, bearing interest at not exceeding 4 per cent, and convertible at their face value at any time prior to July 1, 1919, into shares of the trust.

Big Development Enterprise.

The conveyance of the property is made to Moses Williams, Amory A. Lawrence, Alfred Bowditch and Laurence Minot as trustees and managers of the trust.

The purchase of the property marks the first step in the development of a great tract of land which has remained idle for years. The trustees say this will put an end to the stagnant condition of real estate in this neighborhood for the past dozen years.

The announcement of the deal did not come as a surprise to real estate men. It was known for some time that negotiations had been in progress for the purchase of the land, but at what price was not ascertained until to-day. The property has had a nominal value of about $5,000,000.

It is a matter of conjecture just how soon work will be begun on the property. The first step, however, will be the planning and construction of streets, with the idea of making the land accessible and convenient for business and residential purposes.

To Consider Street Layouts.

No definite plans for the laying out of the streets have been made. The trustees will first consult the Street Commissioners, various civic bodies interested in such matters and owners of real estate whose property would be affected.

In the development of the new area the trustees think the city should take a hand, as well as the owners of realty. For every $100 expended for improvements, they maintain, the should be returned within a reasonable time, and as the direct result of such expenditure, at least $3,000 of new taxable property.

Throughout the negotiations Chairman Carter of the Park Square committee, appointed by the Boston Merchants' Association, and Dr. Minot, a member of the executive committee of the new Chamber of Commerce, were in close touch with all interested parties.

CAMBRIDGE Y. M. C. A. SEEKING $150,000

The Cambridge Y. M. C. A. to-day follows the plan of Boston, Newton and Chelsea and will try to raise $150,000 in the next ten days. The big Boston clock has been placed on the Raymond Building in Central square, Cambridgeport, and at 7 o'clock to-night the work is to begin. The money is to be used in building an addition to the Y. M. C. A. building in Massachusetts avenue.

REPUBLICANS ARE AGAINST HIBBARD FOR MAYORALTY

The Republican City Committee is nearly unanimously opposed to the attempt to secure a Republican indorsement of the candidacy of Mayor Hibbard for re-election. The committee will put forward no candidate nor will it take any part as an organization in the fight for nominations to municipal offices.

These important facts became known to-day when the proceedings of a secret meeting of the city committee that was held last night in the Tremont building were related. President David T. Montague presided and twenty-three of the twenty-five ward chairmen were present.

A resolution placing the committee on record as favoring the re-election of Mayor Hibbard was offered, and a rising vote taken. Every man present stood when it came time to vote down the motion, as is the retaliation of the committee for Mayor Hibbard's action at the beginning of his term of office in appointing the committee in making appointments and declaring that he was a "non-partisan mayor."

One of the two absentees from last night's meetings was Guy A. Ham, chairman of the Ward 20 organization, and a supporter of Mayor Hibbard.

The following resolution eliminating the committee from the fight for nominations was introduced and passed:

"Resolved, That the vote at the election on November 2 demonstrated that the city of Boston desired that the experiments in city government incorporated in Plan Two should be tried out. The Republican City Committee represents the Republicans of Boston in party affairs. The result of the election has shown that a majority of the Republicans of Boston were in favor of Plan Two, and as this plan does away with all party caucuses, conventions and designations of municipal candidates, the Republican City Committee will abide by the result and take no part as an organization in the contest for Mayor by soliciting signatures for any candidate. And be it further Resolved, that this committee indorse no candidate or candidates for any office before the nomination papers are all filed."

Leading Republicans to-day inferred from this resolution that the city committee may come out for some candidate after the time for filing nomination has expired and all applications are in.

SALEM UNION REPROVED BY FEDERATION

TORONTO, Nov. 11.—The rules of the convention of the American Federation of Labor were suspended for the immediate passage to-day of a resolution introduced by President John Tobin of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union. The preamble calls attention to a declaration of the Salem, Mass., Central Labor Union, hostile to the Boot and Shoe Workers' policy regarding the issuance of labels. The resolution called upon the convention of the American Federation of Labor to notify the Salem central body that it must at once reverse its action and without exception recognize the right of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union to attach its own label to its goods. The resolution was unanimously adopted.

A resolution presented by the United Association of Plumbers calls upon the friends of labor to refuse to patronize ball games in which the Cleveland club of the American League is a contestant.

Electrical Workers Protest.

A circular signed by J. R. Robt. J. W. Murphy and H. W. Potter, as president, secretary and executive chairman of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, says that the executive council has placed the union movement "in an ignominious and ridiculous position" in appealing from a United States court decision on the grounds of a violation of constitutional rights while they have enjoined the majority of the electrical workers from exercising their constitutional rights."

YANKEES WILL AID FILIPINOS, TAFT STATES

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—President Taft was an early riser to-day on the occasion of his first meeting at the White House since his departure on his 13,000 mile trip. He breakfasted with Mrs. Taft and her sister, Mrs. Torrey, and by 9 o'clock was busily engaged with Secretary Carpenter and Assistant Secretary Mischler attempting to clear away the most pressing part of the correspondence which has accumulated the last few days.

At 11 the President addressed the Washington Y. M. C. A. missionary convention at Continental Hall.

President Taft said in part:

"I don't think the money we spend on the Philippines has been misused. It has developed our national character, and broadened our views of national responsibilities.

"I am always indignant with the men who express their contempt for missionaries, because they are the antipode of civilization. Their influence in the Philippines acted wonderfully in the work of civil government. They were responsible for the finest feeling.

"I was sent to the Philippines by that engaging character, William McKinley, and I know his spirit animated us all, including Theodore Roosevelt and Elihu Root.

"We have now put into the Philippines for the betterment of the Philippine people. We have done it for the antipode of civilization. Their influence in the Philippines acted wonderfully in the work of civil government. They were responsible for the finest feeling.

"I was sent to the Philippines by that engaging character, William McKinley, and I know his spirit animated us all, including Theodore Roosevelt and Elihu Root.

"We have now put into the Philippines for the betterment of the Philippine people. We have done it for studying gratitude from them, we might as well give the task up now."

It was announced that he would not receive callers to-day owing to the limited time at his disposal before his departure this afternoon for Middletown and New Haven, Ct.

On Monday he will be ready to plunge into affairs of state and commence giving consideration to the many important matters that require his attention.

Mr. Taft will go to-day:

"I am glad to get back. I'm back again feeling fine as well as when I went away—or even better."

The President is in the pink of condition. It is noticeable that he has gained several pounds. He is planning a vigorous campaign of golf to reduce his girth.

MADAME STEINHEIL'S "AUNT LILY" A MAN, SERVANT TESTIFIES

The last of testimony in the trial of quiet housewife devoted to her family and Mme. Marguerite Steinheil was finished today, and the battle of the attorneys with words instead of evidence as weapons opened. The advocate general began with the bitterest denunciations of the accused "tragic widow" which she has yet faced.

The mystery of the automobile that has figured in the case was also cleared by the testimony of Semhel, a chauffeur. He declared that he had driven two fares from the Steinheil home on the night of the crime. In spite of efforts of the attorneys to break him down he stuck to his statement.

Another bit of Mme. Steinheil's affairs of the heart came to the front in the testimony of Cousin, a servant employed in the home of the murdered painter. He declared that the mythical "Aunt Lily," who has been a jest in Paris for a year, was in reality a man.

Under the questioning of the advocate-general the beautiful and fascinating woman pleaded, murmuring heartbroken protests, finally breaking down completely. Not only the central figure of the cause celebre was lashed by the Advocate-General, but her parents as well. They were denounced as utterly worthless—the fit progenitors for such a creature as the prosecution would make Mme. Steinheil out.

"Let them be," begged the defendant, as the prosecutor relentlessly pushed on with the history of her delicacy of motive. Then he took up the story of her own life and laid bare bit by bit much of it as the cause of the State.

Faure's Name Not Mentioned.

The court was under tension during the scene, and the feeling against such a denunciation was strong. It was just 2 o'clock when the prosecution rested its case. But a short time before Mme. Steinheil had reiterated her threats to bare astounding secrets if she were harried further by Judge de Valles.

"I lived through many interesting events," she cried suddenly, with a look of defiance when de Valles attacked her with his sensational cross-examination.

"If you wish to speak you may," he answered coolly, but the beautiful woman turned her head quickly and remained silent in his presence during the Advocate-General's made no mention of the late President Faure, who died in the Steinheil house.

A new portrait of Mme. Steinheil was painted today at her trial by M. Bordet, father-in-law of Mme. Japy, one of the victims of the murders, and by the prisoner's own brother-in-law, M. Ayres. It was not the accepted likeness of a siren whose witchery captivated a score of France's most famous men that they drew. Their picture was that of a quiet, unassuming woman, devoted to her family and to her own children.

Mme. Steinheil was a devoted daughter," declared M. Bordet when he took the stand. The witness declared that he had never seen anything to indicate that the defendant was not entirely devoted to Mme. Japy, and he asserted that this affection was reciprocated.

M. Ayres testified to the same effect and according to his story the woman accused of murdering her artist husband was ever kind and loving toward him. When these two men, who turned out to be no more than character witnesses, left, the reading of the deposition of several minor figures in the case were read and others of equal unimportance testified.

Public Opinin With Her.

Mme. Steinheil received the testimony of the relatives of her stepmother and herself with equanimity. While they were telling their stories she allowed but scant traces of her emotion to be exhibited in her expression, but when they left she smiled with a trace of mockery at the pending ministrate, M. de Valles.

She has taken from the court proceedings of the last few days. If she had behind her subtle influences that have refrained from coming into the open she now is supported by the clamor of the public throughout France. Public opinion, more forcible, is now for the defense. The brutal manner in which the trial has been conducted has done much to bring this about, but the remarkable woman's own splendid exhibition of courage has done more.

The report that the trial was to be stopped for another investigation out of court were more persistent than ever today. Such a move by the prosecution would be nothing short of surrender. It would be an admission of weakness that would swing Mme. Steinheil into the position of a martyr and an idol.

Shoots Mother in His Sleep.

BRUSSELS, Belgium. — A young man named Coulemans got up in his sleep Monday night, walked downstairs to one of the living rooms where a loaded rifle was kept, took the gun, went up to the first floor, entered the bedroom where his parents were sleeping and shot his mother through the brain, killing her instantly. His father, awakened by the discharge of the rifle, jumped up and seized the son as he was coolly refilling the weapon with another cartridge. The two men gave a violent start and exclaimed: "Where am I?" He remained in a dazed condition until after he was arrested, and taken to the nearest police station. He was questioned closely, but could give no idea of what occurred.

Kaiser Says Bust Is Genuine.

BERLIN. The Kaiser, accompanied by Dr. Bode, visited the Kaiser Friedrich Museum to see the way bust Dr. Bode recently purchased in England in the belief that it was the work of Leonardo da Vinci, while in England it is asserted that it was made by Mr. Lucas, an English sculptor. Dr. Bode gave an exhaustive history of the bust and the circumstances leading to its purchase. The Kaiser afterward assured Dr. Bode of his full confidence in his judgment that the bust was genuinely the work of Da Vinci.

Police Played on German Court.

BERLIN. A series of odd frauds upon the First Provincial Court of Berlin was interrupted by the arrest of Lothar Loselicke, a professional detective, and Hans Meier, a cook. According to the charges against these men they were in the habit of breaking into the courtrooms in the afternoon when no others were in the building except the janitors. By putting on judges' caps and robes they were able to deceive the janitors and go about undisturbed, clothing themselves to the forms and seats they drew up the necessary documents for collecting debts owed to the court.

Men's Actual New $1.50 Negligee, Coat Style Shirts At 65c

Made by one of the best shirt makers in the country from the finest new cheviots, in an excellent assortment of patterns.

The story of this bargain is this—Because of a dispute between the mill and the firm who made these fine shirts, the latter was able to obtain a discount on this lot of cheviot materials.

The shirt maker claimed slight imperfections in this lot of materials.

The mill experts refused to admit the imperfections, but sold the cloth at a discount, under the most rigid agreement that the shirts should be stamped "Seconds"—knowing full well, however, that this lot of cheviots was absolutely perfect.

You will find them stamped "Seconds," but we defy you to find any imperfections in the materials, making, patterns, or anything throughout these fine shirts. Worth $1.50 of any man's money, and you can buy them Friday at 65c.

But you had better come early, for the lot is small, and we doubt if they will last the day out.

MISS SEARS IS ATTRACTION AT HORSE SHOW

The red coats of the hard-riding fox hunter members of society were the heroes yesterday in Madison Square Garden at the third day of the New York Horse Show.

Riders from Boston were among the leaders, headed by A. Henry Higginson of Lincoln, son of Major Henry L. Higginson, and master of the Middlesex Hunt.

Boston society people were on hand in great numbers to cheer the local entries. These included Mrs. A. Henry Higginson who was Jean Lodwick; Eleanora Sears, Mr. and Mrs. Austen Gray, Baron von Schroeder, Andrew Robeson and a number of society people from the Berkshire section of Massachusetts, including Cornelia Barnes, Mrs. Fred Bull, wife of the master of the Berkshire Hunt, and Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Spaulding of Colonset.

While Mr. Higginson failed to capture a winner with his mount, T. Douglas Robinson of the Essex Country Club captured a first prize in the heavyweight pony class with his chestnut gelding, Hand Spring.

The long-expected forthcoming announcement of the engagement of Miss Eleanora Sears and young Harold Vanderbilt, caused Miss Sears to be regarded with much interest at the show.

In the afternoon she was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Vanderbilt in their box. The girl, who has been called the best dressed young woman in Boston society, wore in the afternoon a black diagonal coat suit with large black hat trimmed with aigrettes, and wore a fur. After the afternoon show Miss Sears was entertained at luncheon in the club room with Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Vanderbilt, Alfred G. Vanderbilt acting as host.

At night Miss Sears was the guest of the Harry Payne Whitneys in their box, and wore a beautiful gown of jade rose colored chiffon over white satin, with hat of black velvet with black and white ostrich feathers and garlands of pale rose.

WHEN YOU GO TO BED. Mme. tells in the Sunday American how to win beauty the last minute in the day.

Nearly everybody in Boston reads the AMERICAN.

BRIDE TO BE WHO IS A VICTIM OF IMMIGRATION RUSH

Marian R. Musgrave.

Pretty Miss Marian R. Musgrave, twenty-two, is one of the most disappointed girls in New England, and Herbert Jackson, a young shoemaker of Lynn, is one of the angriest men in this big city because the immigration officials are hurled almost to distraction in passing on thousands of passengers who come to Boston today on two big steamships.

Miss Marian is here from her home in Leeds, England, to become Jackson's bride. The girl burst into tears when she found she could not even see her husband-to-be perhaps for many hours. The bridegroom raced up and down the long pier saying forcibly what he thought of official red tape.

The hour the immigration and customs people would promise Jackson until he instructed him that they could not make it possible for the wedding to take place late today.

ROXBURY HAS NEW DISPLAY OF PREMIUMS

Yet another addition has been made to the list of places where the premiums of the BOSTON AMERICAN are on exhibition. A display was opened today in the store of Laurence A. Bettman, importer and jobber of novelties and dealer of periodicals, at No. 1132 Columbus avenue, Roxbury Crossing. A full set of the various articles offered are to be seen there, giving an accurate idea of the tremendous opportunity laid before the readers of the daily and Sunday AMERICAN.

Boston and the surrounding territory has gone premium mad. Crowds come to the premium display room in the Boston American Building both day and evening, and those who find themselves unable to come in person send relatives and friends.

"Have you seen the premiums?" That is getting to be a question commonly heard on the streets of Boston. In most cases the question is followed by a trip to the Boston American Building or to one of the many places in Boston and surrounding towns where the articles are on display.

No Limit to Gifts.

To see the articles is to want them. No good housewife, or man, who is particular about the furnishing of his home or his place of business goes away from the premiums without expressing a determination to have one or another piece of goods.

You can have as many of the premiums as you want. You can save one set of Coupons and get one piece of goods. You can save one set and then keep on saving another.

Any way you do it, just so you get thirty of consecutive dates and present them with a small cash payment at the Premium Department of the BOSTON AMERICAN and then you can carry away the article you want.

Start Saving To-day.

Remember you can start any day. You are not too late. You are not too early. You are not too late because you were not told before when the plan was first announced. All you need is thirty coupons of consecutive dates.

These premiums are for you, whether you are an old or a new reader of the BOSTON AMERICAN. Many of those who already started clipping those coupons on Page 2, start today. It is as easy to get started as started.

Once you get started and once you see the premiums for yourself, you will keep on clipping the coupons. Many premiums have not yet been announced. There are special surprises still in store for you. Watch for the announcements after made you in next SUNDAY'S AMERICAN. Start clipping those coupons to-day. Then keep on clipping them for thirty consecutive days.

WANTS NEW THEATRE BOOKINGS EXTENDED

Charles J. Ross, the comedian, now playing in "The Love Cure" at the Tremont Theatre, has written a letter to the New York Telegraph criticising Sherburne Ames, formerly of this city, and Mr. Ames's associate directors in the New Theatre, New York, for not giving Klaw & Erlanger bookings as well as Shubert, ones in the respective road tour of the New Theatre company.

Mr. Ross says that Governor Hughes of New York, in accepting the New Theatre as its gubernatorial residence, "did himself no end of harm as a prospective candidate for a presidential nomination in 1912 or a re-election as governor in 1910."

"Why do not Mr. Ames and his directors arrange to book through Klaw & Erlanger as well as the Shuberts?"

ARREST CLEARS UP B. & M. BURGLARIES?

NEWBURYPORT, Nov. 11. With the arrest of Charles A. Meinerth of this city and the appearance of others, who will probably be taken into custody soon, the police believe that they have cleared up burglaries at the Beach, Main street, house, where hundreds and probably thousands of dollars' worth of property has been pilfered recently.

Meinerth, it is believed, confessed to having taken the goods, for later the officers visited a small public house of the city and recovered a large amount of different kinds of merchandise.

SPLENDID SONG FREE. "A Boat Sails on Wednesday," from "The Dollar Princess," given with the Sunday American.

KANSAS PREACHERS LEAD LIQUOR RAIDS

LEAVENWORTH, Kas., Nov. 11. Two ministers but a raid upon an illicit saloon in this city, which resulted in the seizure of twenty cases of beer and two jugs of whiskey. This was pay day at Fort Leavenworth, and Police were liberally patronized by the soldiers.

The minister made a complaint of police blackmail and was encountered to lead the officers in the raid.

NEW SYMPHONY SOLOIST.

A new soloist will make his debut with the Symphony Orchestra at the regular concerts on Friday and Saturday afternoons, Dec 10 and 20. He is Sylvain Noack, the violinist engaged last year as concert master of the orchestra. Mr. Noack was to have performed the Lalo concerto for violin and orchestra at the second concert, but was prevented from appearing and the work was postponed until this year. He is a violinist of great ability and he has selected the Saint-Saens concerto number 3, in B minor.

WOMAN GETS POST.

Mabel Simpkins Agassis of Yarmouth has been named as a Free Public Library Commissioner by Governor Draper. Her nomination was sent to the council for confirmation. The Governor also nominated Moses S. Case of Marblehead as a trial justice for Essex County.

TERRIBLE TRAGEDY IN MARS? Has all life been wiped out on that planet? Absorbing discussion by the leading scientists of the day in the Sunday American.

SUES OVER SON'S BODY.

Giovanni Santuosso has filed a bill in the Superior Court in equity against Thomas Michenelli for the right to remove the body of his four-year-old son, Giovanni, Jr., who was buried in the Michenelli lot in Holy Cross Cemetery, Malden. Santuosso declares he has tried to remove the body three times since November 3.

MANTIR SAYS POLICE TRIED TO FORCE ANSWERS IN THIRD DEGREE

Prisoner Declares He Was Never Near Scene of Killing With Delorey on Fatal Friday.

it and walked slowly to the stand. He gave his name as James Mantir and said that he came from Greece. He testified that his right name was Dionisios Spiroupoulos, but that he adopted the name of Mantir when he came to this country. His age, he said, was nineteen. He said he came to this country three years ago. His father is dead. He has a mother and three sisters and brothers. He was then asked:

Q.—When you came to this country, where did you first go? A.—No. 60 Central avenue, Lynn, where I worked for a Greek named James Giftas.

Q.—When you went to Mrs. Delorey's farm in Billerica did you have some money with you? A.—Yes, $105.

Q.—Where did you have it before you went there? A.—In the bank at Lynn.

Q.—Did you draw it out when you left Lynn? A.—Yes.

District-Attorney Higgins interjected that he admitted that Mantir had the money.

Q.—What clothes did you have when you went to Mrs. Delorey's farm? A.—One suit, an overcoat and some shirts.

Q.—Did you have more than one suit? A.—No.

Identifies Bloody Sweater.

At this point District Attorney Higgins asked Attorney Winslow to step aside, so he could see the witness.

"I want to see him and I can't through you," said Mr. Higgins.

Q.—Where did you get the overcoat? A.—In Lynn.

Q.—What color was it? A.—Black.

Q.—Did you have a sweater like this one?

The witness was shown the one which Professor Whitney said contained a spot of human blood.

Q.—Did you have a sweater of that color? A.—It looks like one I had.

Q.—Could you tell if that is your sweater? A.—It looks like it.

Mantir took up the sweater, examined it and said:

"In June I washed it and Mrs. Delorey sewed it right there," indicating the needle-work with his finger.

Q.—When did you first see Peter Delorey? A.—In March.

Q.—Do you know what day? A.—On Sunday.

Q.—What Sunday was it? A.—The Sunday after registration day.

Q.—What day was that? A.—March 14.

Q.—Did anything else happen on registration day at the farm? A.—Yes, a fire in the house.

Q.—What did you do? A.—I found Mrs. Delorey fainted when I got back, and she told me to go up and put water down the chimney on the fire. I got a ladder and Mrs. Alma Delorey gave me water. I put the water down the chimney and the dust all came up on me.

Q.—Did any of the soot drop on you? A.—Yes, and the dust it came on me.

Sweater Covered With Soot.

Q.—Did you have on the sweater that day? A.—Yes.

Q.—What did you do with the sweater that day? A.—In the afternoon about 2 o'clock Mrs. Delorey went to Billerica Centre. When she went I went to the barn and took off the sweater and my pants, and I washed them and put them on the stone wall.

Q.—Did you at any time wash your sweater except that day. A.—No; never.

Q.—Did you at any time wash any other clothes except on that day? A.—Never.

The prosecution claims that Mantir washed his clothing in the barn on March 28, the day after Annie Mullins was murdered, and on which her body was found in Squires Field, Arlington.

Q.—When did you first see Peter Delorey? A.—The day after the fire.

Q.—And you know the date of the fire? A.—Yes, it was March 14, 1908.

Q.—Then the first time that you ever saw Peter Delorey was on Sunday, March 15, 1908. A.—Yes.

The Trip to Boston.

Q.—Where did you see him first and what were the circumstances? A.—I saw him at 7 o'clock that Sunday night on the Chelmsford road, at the side of the road where we meet the electrics. Peter and one of the twin boys were waiting there in a wagon for me. I had been to Boston and was coming back to the farm. I took the wagon with Peter and we were both driven together to the afrm.

Q.—And next day you and Peter worked together on the farm? A.—Yes.

Q.—Now when did Peter leave the farm after this Sunday? A.—He left on the following morning.

Q.—Did you know where he was going? A.—I knew he was going to Boston.

Judge Fox then said: "Now, let us be clear about these dates. This is Sunday, March 22, 1908?"

"Yes, Sunday, March 22nd; that's the date I am talking about,' replied Mantir.

Q.—Now, during the rest of the week what did you and Peter do? A.—Well, we worked on the farm, cutting down logs and doing the general work that I had been doing, and Peter helped.

Q.—When did Peter leave the farm during that week? A.—He left the farm on Friday morning.

Q.—This, then was Friday morning, March 27, 1908? A.—Yes, the Friday after that Sunday of the 22d when we had been out to his house.

This was the date of the murder.

Q.—Did you go with him? A.—No. I worked all day in the orchard.

Slept Late on Saturday.

Q.—And now on Saturday what did you do? A.—I slept late Saturday morning.

Q.—Was that unusual? A.—No, because Mrs. Delorey always let me sleep late Saturday morning. One of the twins could take the milk to the station that morning because they wouldn't have to go to school. So I didn't get up until after 7 o'clock.

Q.—Was Peter there at the time? A.—He was not there.

Q.—Did you see Peter that Saturday at all—Saturday, March 28? A.—No, not at all.

I saw him Sunday evening.

Q.—Well, coming now to the next week, what did you do that week? A.—I worked just the same, out on the farm.

Mantir said he then took a bath at Billerica, but didn't tell where. After that he went to the dentist's at Neponset. He returned to the farm by way of Dudley street and Sullivan square.

Q.—Did you meet a team anywhere while you were going from Sullivan square to the farm? A.—I met a team between Bedford and Chelmsford road.

Q.—Who was on the team? A.—One of the twin boys and Peter.

Q.—Did you ride on the wagon? A.—No. I walked. We all walked.

Q.—When they left the farm that morning to go down to Aunt Alma's for the furniture did they take something in a bag along with them? A.—I think they took a chicken.

Q.—Who put the chicken in the bag? A.—I think I did.

Q.—That was on Tuesday? A.—Yes.

Q.—Was Mabel there when you got back to the farm that night? A.—Yes.

Q.—What evening did Mabel come up? A.—The day before the furniture came up.

Q.—On the first evening after supper what did you do? A.—We went into the other room and Mabel played the piano and Peter sang.

Q.—Did you sing? A.—No (laughing).

The witness spoke in a low voice. At times the jury had difficulty in hearing him. His tone was almost feminine.

Makes Absolute Denial.

Q.—Do you remember what Peter sang that night? A.—I remember one song, "Honey Boy."

Q.—Do you remember what happened on Wednesday? A.—Yes, after I came back from bringing the milk, Edward and Whitney, the twins, fooled me with the April fool. That was Wednesday, April 1.

Q.—When did Peter leave the farm? A.—The next Friday afternoon.

Q.—Were you ever in Boston with Peter on any Friday? A.—Never.

Q.—Were you ever in Boston with Peter on any Saturday? A.—Never.

Q.—Were you ever in Boston with Peter on any Sunday? A.—Once only.

Q.—Were you ever in Boston, Cambridge or Somerville with Peter on any Friday? A.—Never.

Q.—Were you ever in Boston, Cambridge or Somerville with Peter on any Saturday? A.—Never.

Q.—Do you remember when the auction was at Dan Lane's? A.—Yes, the auction was the next week after Peter left, on Saturday.

Q.—How long have you shaved yourself? A.—I first put a razor on my face one month before I went on the farm.

Q.—When you went to the farm did you take a razor with you? A.—No. I had a razor, but it was in Lynn where I used to work.

Didn't Have a Razor.

Q.—Did you have a razor while Peter was at Mrs. Delorey's in Billerica? A.—No. I didn't shave myself then.

Q.—Did you take a razor to the farm at any time while you were there? A.—I took a razor up on Decoration Day, May 30th.

Q.—And you stayed there until the last of July or the first of August, didn't you? A.—Yes.

Q.—From the time Peter left until the

Q.—Did you bring a suit against Mrs. Delorey after you left the farm? A.—Yes.

Q.—When did you first hear of the Annie Mullins murder? A.—Sunday evening.

Q.—From whom did you first hear of the murder? A.—From Mrs. Elizabeth K. Delorey's own mouth.

Q.—Who got the paper that Sunday? A.—I went to Billerica with one of the twins and bought some paper and candy.

Q.—Who read the paper that Sunday? A.—Mrs. Delorey and, I think, one of the boys. (Mrs. Delorey has testified she couldn't see to read.)

Q.—Could you read the paper? A.—No, I looked at the pictures.

Q.—Who explained the pictures to you? A.—Mrs. Delorey and sometimes the boys.

Q.—Where was Peter when you got the paper? A.—In Boston.

Q.—Did you wear the sweater after the fire? A.—Yes.

Q.—Do you remember when it got torn and how? A.—Yes, I was out with one of the twins and we were having a hard time with the cow. The cow was pulling away from us and we were trying to get the cow up to the barn. The cow got away and threw me up against a barbed wire fence. The sweater was torn then.

Hand Bled, Sweater Was Torn.

Q.—Did anything else happen at that time when the cow threw you against the barbed wire fence? A.—Yes, the barbed wire tore my hand and it bled.

Q.—When did you last wear the sweater? A.—Some time in July.

Q.—When did you last see the sweater? A.—In the barn just before I left the farm. It was in the hands of Mrs. Delorey.

Q.—Now when did you leave Manchester and under what circumstances? A.—I left Manchester on April 2, responding to a letter which came from my lawyer. I came to Boston expecting to get some money due me from Mrs. Delorey. I went to the office of my lawyer and in the doorway I saw one of the twins. He said to me, "Jim, did you see my mother?" Just then three men grabbed me. They ran their hands over my clothes and told me that they had a warrant for my arrest and were going to take me to the Lowell court. I told them I wanted to see my lawyer, but they said, "No, come on now." They took me to Scollay Square and there Mrs. Delorey was waiting. They asked me a lot of questions. Some of them I don't remember.

Q.—Who were the officers that arrested you? A.—State Officer Byrnes, who is sitting over there, and Sergeant Canney.

Never in Lowell Before.

Q.—Well, what happened then? A.—Well, after a car ride they took me to a sidewalk and asked me if I ever saw the place before. I said no, I'd never been in Lowell before. Canney said, "Jim, don't you remember meeting a girl out here one Friday night with Peter Delorey. I said, "No, I was never out here with Peter Delorey on a Friday night and never met any girl with him except his sister Mabel, one Sunday." Then they brought me into the police station and Lieut. Gordon had me locked up.

Q.—Was anything said at the time? A.—Sergt. Canney said, "Jim, Peter Delorey says you met a girl out here with him one Friday night. I again said I didn't. Lieut. Gordon then put up his hand and told Conney to stop talking to me. I was then locked up.

Q.—Now tell us as far as you can just what happened during the rest of the evening? A.—Lieutenant Gordon took a chair and sat down in front of my cell door. He told me that detectives had gone out to arrest Peter. He told me that Peter had said that I had met a girl out on the avenue with him. I told him that I did not. He kept asking me lots of questions and went over the story told by Mrs. Delorey.

I told Gordon that I never left the farm with Peter on a Friday. I told him I'd been with Peter one Sunday and I told him that I did wash some clothes, but that Mrs. Delorey didn't ask me about any hot water and that the whole story was different from what really happened. He asked me if I wasn't accustomed to carry a razor. I told him I didn't carry a razor and only had one at the farm for the last few months.

Tells of Third Degree.

Then Gordon tried to have me tell him that I got drunk now and then. I told him that I didn't drink anything and didn't even use tobacco. Then he said, "Jim, you didn't wash the blood off your sweater very good." I told him I didn't try to wash any blood off my sweater. Gordon went out and after a while brought me into his office. It was dark then. Before taking me out he came and went from my cell door, every time asking me some questions. When I was taken out after dark to the office Peter Delorey was there and Mrs. Delorey.

Gordon sat me down by a desk, put my feet right between his, shoved a paper at me and asked me to read it. I saw just one word on the paper, the word "Friday." Gordon hollered and read the paper. "This is Delorey's confession," he said. I was scared. He shoved the sweater at me and told me there was a blood spot on it. He couldn't find the blood spot. Then he turned angrily round and said to the officers, "Did anybody leave Jim alone here? He's cut the spot out of the sweater." I told him I wasn't left alone and that I didn't cut anything from the sweather. Gordon kept hollering at me and I kept saying that I was not with Peter. They brought me out again and again. The last time they had me out from the cell was after 10 o'clock at night.

Charges Cruelty by Police.

Q.—What happened at that time? A.—Mr. Byrnes talked fast and the chife said, "Did you see anyone running around?" I said to them, "I don't know anything about it." They said to me, "Say yes." I said, "I can't say yes." They said, "Say no, if you can't say yes." I then said to them, "I don't know anything about it at all." Then one of them said to me, "You don't know anything; go in the room."

Then they put me in the cell. I asked one of the police officers for a blanket and he said to wait until he got a key. I waited for an hour and they didn't give me the blanket. I slept on the floor. It was the first time I ever slept on the floor in my life.

Q.—Tell us what was said when Lieutenant Gordon started to read Peter's confession?

A.—Well, Lieutenant Gordon said to me, "If you don't say yes it will be worse for you." I said to him, "Well, I can't lie. I can't say yes because I can't lie."

Q.—When Lieutenant Gordon first spoke to you what kind of clothes did he wear. A.—Clothes just like mine. Common clothes.

Q.—When he came to ask you all those questions how was he dressed. A.—Brass buttons, gold lace, gilt on his shoulders.

Q.—Now did you talk to any officer next morning? A.—Yes, Sergeant Canney talked to me.

Declared Peter Lied.

Q.—When you were in court that morning, did you know where you were? A.—I thought I was in Lowell.

Q.—At the station house when you were brought out with Peter and Peter told the story which the officers in court say he told, what did you say? A.—I said, "I don't know anything about it."

Q.—During the talk in the station house did you say that Peter was not telling the truth. A.—I said, "Peter lies." I said something stronger to Gordon. I said, "I don't think Peter knows anything about it." I said, "I don't think Peter came from the farm that Friday." I said, "I don't think Peter came back to the far mthat Saturday morning."

This concluded the direct examination of Mantir. He was on the stand for direct questioning two hours and fifteen minutes.

DOCTORS SEE ICE WATER SWIMMER

Over 500 physicians of Greater Boston were present at Keith's Theatre to-day at a private demonstration given by Samuel Mahoney, the Revere Life Guard, who is appearing in "The Frozen North." Previous to an exhibition of ice water bathing Mahoney told how he had developed himself from a helpless invalid to his present condition of perfect health. He illustrated his remarks with stereopticon pictures of physical cluture exercise, and of life due. At the conclusion of his address he was given an ovation by the physicians, many of whom were his personal friends. All the physicians were loud in their praise of the former life guard. They characterized his case as one of the best on record as to the great benefits that can be derived from proper physical exercise.

FLYERS GATHER FOR BIG RACES

COVINGTON, Ky., Nov. 11.—The Latonia race track has been converted into a tented city housing a host of dirigible balloons and airships of almost every style. Knabenshue, Peachy and Dixon had their dirigibles all rigged up ready for the trial spins to-day while Willard's biplane and Glen Curtiss's aeroplane were in course of construction. All the "skylarks" appeared enthusiastic over the ideal conformation of the plant and the surrounding country for flying, and several of them predict record-breaking performances.

SCARLET FEVER CLOSES SCHOOL

Fifty pupils of the sixth grade of Carter school, Chelsea, will have a vacation until Monday, owing to the discovery of a case of scarlet fever there. The Board of Health to-day closed the grade and fumigated the room. There are twelve cases of scarlet fever, which is an unusually small number for this time of year, and the Health Board believes that there will be no spread of the disease from the school case.

GASTON MEN FIGHT NOMINATION OF STORROW

Candidates Shy of Entering the Mayoralty Race Under Present Conditions.

With the first meeting of the Committee of Nine to nominate one or more mayoralty candidates for the committee of One Hundred and Fifty this afternoon the race for Mayor of Boston takes a more definite course. The contest is rapidly resolving down to one among from three to five men.

Edmund Billings, secretary of the Good Government Association, insisted to-day that James J. Storrow is still in the field "Men who don't believe that Mr. Storrow would make a strong candidate say that Mr. Billings is dying hard."

It was learned to-day that James J. Phelan of the banking house of Hornblower & Weeks, who has been approached by representatives of the Committee of One Hundred and Fifty to allow the use of his name by the Committee of Nine on mayoralty candidates, is a stand-pat Joseph H. O'Neil man. Mr. Phelan wants Mr. O'Neil to run for Mayor. Mr. O'Neil is mum. His closest friends say that he is not anxious to enter a contest as turbulent as the race promises to be.

Capen to Stay on Committee.

John R. Murphy, former water commissioner, has also been asked to allow the use of his name by the Committee of One Hundred and Fifty. Mr. Murphy is said to be willing to stand as the committee's candidate in case the Storrow candidacy does not materialize.

Charles S. Hamlin to-day set at rest the rumor that Samuel B. Capen is not to remain a member of the Committee of Nine. Mr. Capen is in Washington. Rumor has had it that some one was to be appointed to his place. "Nothing in the story," said Mr. Hamlin to-day. "Mr. Capen notified me that he could not attend to-day's meeting. I see no reason why his absence should bar him from participating in future sessions of the committee."

To-day's meeting was arranged solely for the purpose of organization. A chairman and secretary had to be chosen. The meeting time was 4 p. m., and the place, Mr. Hamlin's office, No. 14 Beacon street.

Beacon street to-day continued to hear rumors of opposition by financial men to the Storrow candidacy. The rumor spreaders held up the name of Augustus P. Gaston, "friends of William A. Gaston." Mr. Gaston, it is said, would not be grieved if former Mayor John F. Fitzgerald is elected for four years more.

Gaston Men for Hibbard?

One line of gossip in the financial district to-day had it that Mayor Hibbard's candidacy for re-election is getting encouragement from "the Gaston men." "The Gaston men," it is said, count on the Hibbard candidacy to weaken Storrow. The Storrow men, the same rumor had it, are exerting every effort to have Mayor Hibbard withdraw. They are also trying to get another popular Democrat besides Fitzgerald into the race, according to the same rumor.

The Republican organization as a whole is not going to take any stand-between candidates. District leaders are already tied up with a half-dozen candidates. Men who ought to know said to-day that the Donovan faction among the Democrats is also destined for a five young cub war. The two dozen leaders who make up "the Donovan clan" are working for different candidates.

Hot Fling from Brand.

Chairman Brand of the Board of Aldermen handed the new reform organization some hot shot to-day, when in a statement he characterized the new movement as a "Blackboard Party." He terms Bernard J. Rothwell the "boss" of the organization.

Alderman James M. Curley was the first of the council candidates to file his slate. The first nomination papers were those of a combination consisting of Alderman Curley, James F. Timilty, Timothy J. Buckley, Andrew A. Badaracco, James J. Gibbs, Joseph J. Norton, James J. Byrne. The papers contained 1,000 of the 5,000 names necessary for nomination.

MURDER AND SUICIDE.

BERRE, Ky., Nov. 11.—Cash Moody killed his wife with a butcher knife, set fire to the house and took carbolic acid to-day. He was reached by neighbors, but died before the pain which formed to reach him could get him.

Check That Cold

It is a great mistake to let a cough or cold run unrelieved. Aside from the unpleasantness and discomfort there is a real danger in the resulting irritation of the throat, lungs and bronchial organs, which leaves them sore and very susceptible to pneumonia and consumption.

It is not our purpose to recommend any particular brand of patent cough medicine. A simple, harmless and very effective remedy can easily be prepared at home by mixing two ounces of Glycerine and a half-ounce of Virgin Oil of Pine compound pure with eight ounces of pure Whiskey. This formula is frequently prescribed and is highly recommended by the Leach Chemical Co. of Cincinnati, who prepare the genuine Virgin Oil of Pine compound pure for dispensing through drug stores.

It is claimed that a teaspoonful of this mixture four times a day will break up a cold in twenty-four hours and cure any cough that is curable.

UNION LABOR IS ADVOCATED BY CUMMINGS

Matthew Cummings, superintendent of the street cleaning and sprinkling division during the Fitzgerald administration, and now a candidate for Mayor of Boston, today formally announced that he seeks the office and stands on platforms to the BOSTON AMERICAN. He said:

"I am entirely opposed to contract labor wherever it can be done away with.

"I believe the comfort, welfare and happiness of citizens should be the first aim of the Mayor.

"I am opposed to false economy. I believe in honest economy.

"I am a thorough believer in day labor and in union labor wherever it can be employed. There cannot be any graft or dishonesty in connection with day labor.

"I am progressive and believe we should widen our streets, make a connection between the North and South stations and develop our water front. Instead of using ashes and street dirt twenty miles down the bay at great expense, we ought to fill in the flats along the water front from South station to the Neponset river.

Came from Ireland as a Boy.

"We should have a dumping station in every square mile in Boston and dirt should be carted to the nearest dump. Elevated roads which enjoys a free franchise.

"My friends consider me eminently qualified to be Mayor of Boston. They have had lawyers, bankers and professional politicians in the office. Now they think it is time there was a Mayor who has earned his bread by the sweat of his brow and made a success of everything he has undertaken.

"I was born in Ireland and my parents died when I was a mere baby. I came to Boston as a steerage passenger. I attended the evening high school in the old Bowditch schoolhouse on North Bennet for a year. I was doing man's work in a factory when I was only 15 years old. I was a moulder's trade in the South Boston Iron Works, and from that plant went to the Norway Iron Works, where I became an expert furnace man and rose to be foreman of everything about iron making. I went to the Watertown Arsenal and later built the furnaces there, and after several years went to the Charlestown navy yard where I held the same post. I left it to become the superintendent of the street cleaning division and before I resigned from the yard I received public commendation for efficiency from Captain Harris, U. S. N., who was then head of the ordnance department. During the many years I was in the employ of the Government I invented three valuable patents. I am now president and manager of the Cummings Patent Furnace Company.

No Criticism by Commission.

"During the years I worked hard during the day and attended night school. I became proficient in chemistry and metallurgy. I also studied law, although I never intended to seek admission to the bar. I wanted to equip myself for any position.

"During the time I was at the head of the street cleaning division my administration was so efficient that I was one of the few department heads, possibly the only one, not called before the Finance Commission. I had more men working in my department than it had ever had before and I raised the pay of laborers so the wage scale would be maintained. For each year I kept well within my appropriation.

"When Mr. Fox, so-called expert, was brought here from Chicago by professional mufflers in the Back Bay, although he had twenty-seven spotters employed to watch my men, the only recommendation he could make was that helpers and old men should be discharged. My answer went to the Finance Commission with my request for an investigation of my department, but the commission was so well satisfied with my answer that it decided no investigation was necessary."

WARWICK MAN ILL, COMMITS SUICIDE

WARWICK, Nov. 11.—James White, aged sixty-seven years, committed suicide by hanging himself in an ice house in the rear of his home. Despondency, due to ill-health, is believed to have been responsible for his act.

Mr. White was well known in Orange and at one time he conducted the Warwick Hotel.

INCREASE IN EXPORTS.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—An increase of more than $24,000,000 in the value of exports of domestic products from the United States is shown for the month of October last, compared with a like period last year, the respective totals being $123,646,729, against $101,783,048.

This, and the further fact that the exports of wheat during the year 12,932,146 bushels for October, 1908, to 8,766,419 bushels in October last, and that the value of the exports of meat and dairy products fell from $11,833,312 in October, 1908, to $8,736,740 in October last, are the interesting features noted in a statement issued to-day by the Bureau of Statistics.

FIRST DOSE ENDS INDIGESTION, HEARTBURN OR GAS ON STOMACH.

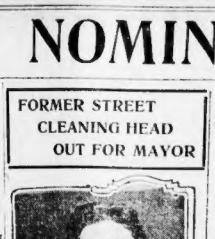
The question as to how long you are going to continue a sufferer from Indigestion, Dyspepsia or out-of-order stomach is merely a matter of how soon you begin taking some Diapepsin.

If your Stomach is lacking in digestive power, why not help the stomach to do its work, not with drastic drugs, but in a perfectly natural way, that of the experts of meat and dairy products fell from $11,833,312 in October, 1908, to $8,736,740 in October last, are the interesting features noted in a statement issued to-day by the Bureau of Statistics.

Sick Stomach, and besides, what you eat will not ferment and poison your breath with nauseous odors. All these symptoms resulting from a sour, out-of-order stomach and dyspepsia are positively relieved five minutes after taking a little Diapepsin.

Go to your druggist and get a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin now, and you will always go to the table with a hearty appetite, and what you eat will taste good, because your stomach and intestines will be clean and fresh, and you will know there are not going to be any more bad nights and miserable days for you. They freshen you and make you feel like life is worth living.

FORMER STREET CLEANING HEAD OUT FOR MAYOR



MATTHEW CUMMINGS

Political Notes of Both Parties

It is somebody stealing Fitz's thunder. Here is the Raleigh Chamber of Commerce awaiting a $100 prize for the best slogan for the North Carolina capital to Edward N. Cox for the alliterative line "Biggest Better and Busiest Raleigh." It looks like plagiarism, but it may be only a coincidence.

Horace H. Butler of Meridian street, East Boston, will be one of the oldest, if not the oldest candidate whose name will appear upon the ballot, provided he fills the nomination papers for the City Council he has taken out. Mr. Butler is eighty years of age and prominent in the Odd Fellows and the Knights of Columbus.

Ex-Mayor Fitzgerald repaired one of his broken fences at the Tammany Club hall when after a talk with Congressman Frederick H. O'Connell it was announced that the "Red Devil" leader will line up his organization for the 5 o'clock Ward 20 was the only ward in the city in which Fitzgerald did not have an effective working organization.

One of Mayor Hibbard's signature canvassers reported that he had solicited 500 voters at the City Club and was only able to secure a half-dozen signatures for the Mayor's papers. It is said, however, that the Mayor has already 2,500 signatures to his papers.

The price of signatures is going up, not now and then, but every day. The candidates strikes a bargain. Councilman Harding succeeded in purchasing 53 good signatures yesterday for the sum of $1, the lowest price yet quoted.

Former Mayor Nathan Matthews will not name the councilmanic slate of the City Club committee himself, says one of the members of the committee. "I will have confidence in whom I believe, regardless of whether Matthews believes in them or not," he said, "and I will do a minority report if this is necessary."

Some of the South Boston leaders have got their eyes out for Senator Patrick H. O'Connor of Ward 15. They say that he attended the conference of the Massachusetts Democratic state committee at the Tech at the invitation by "Jim" Donovan, and yet ignored the invitations he received to confer with the peninsula leaders. Councilor Barry and John J. Lydon represented Ward 15.

SCHOOL RIVALS MEET ON GRIDIRON

The Preparatory League game between the two great rivals, Brookline High and Newton High schools, will be played this afternoon at Newtonville. It has been many years since Brookline High has had a championship crown, and, now that all the players who have been under the ban because of studies are eligible to play, the boys look for a victory. On the other hand, Newton High has been crowded with work the last few days under Coach McDevitt, and feels confident of winning.

REPORT KENNEDY SANE; TRIAL SOON

Drs. George L. Walton and Edward R. Utley of Newton reported in the Middlesex Superior Court, that John J. Kennedy of Waltham was drunk and not insane when he was alleged to have shot Patrolman Vernon Brown of Watertown last Summer. Kennedy will now have to stand trial for assault with intent to murder.

TUFTS TUG OF WAR WON BY SOPHOMORES

The annual Freshmen-Sophomore tug of war was held on the old campus at Tufts College and the fifty sophomores proved their superiority over their lowlier, fresh-men opponents in two easy pulls. A great crowd of upper classmen gathered to see the contest which helps to decide whether the freshmen will be allowed to fly their numerals.

MUST PAY DAMAGE DUE TO COAL TAR

BROCKTON, Nov. 11.—In a test case before a jury in the Superior Court a verdict was returned against the Brockton Gaslight Company for damages due to the smoke, greasy soot and foul odors from the use of coal tar as fuel in its furnaces and benches.

MULLEN NEXT CHOICE OF 25 TO 1 STORROW?

In the event of James J. Storrow declining to be the committee of twenty-five nominee for Mayor, some members of the committee, it is said, are prepared to urge Thomas A. Mullen to be the candidate. Mr. Mullen will be asked if he is disposed to be a candidate.

The bringing of Mr. Mullen's name into the campaign will be a surprise to political clans. The best informed men in politics had not expected that he was one of those likely to be selected by the committee of twenty-five.

Mr. Mullen was a member of the School-house Commission, to which he was appointed by John F. Fitzgerald. He is a brother of the Department of Weights and Measures and was secretary to Mayor Quincy.

He is a native of South Boston and attended the Lawrence Grammar School there, after which he went to Harvard where he graduated with the highest honors in 1874. He was born in Pennsylvania and in 1885 became master in the Boston Latin School, in addition, he held until 1895, when he began the study of law at Harvard. In 1896 he was appointed assistant city solicitor.

If Mullen should become the candidate the members of the committee who favor his selection if Storrow declines, figure that he would make a vigorous speaking campaign.

Mr. Mullen is well known in political circles. He has always been prominent in Democratic affairs.

THREE KILLED IN POWDER EXPLOSION

WILMINGTON, Del., Nov. 11.—An explosion in the Hagley yard of the Dupont Powder Company, five miles from Wilmington, to-day destroyed two mills. Three men are reported killed and a score injured. Black powder only was manufactured at this plant. The cause of the explosion has not been ascertained, but is supposed to have been caused by a spark from a workman's shoe when he stepped on a stone at the threshold of one of the buildings. The explosion was heard and felt in Philadelphia, thirty-five miles from the scene of the explosion.

NIAGARA FALLS A "PLAGUE SPOT"

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Nov. 11.—Professor W. T. Sedgewick of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, at last night's session of the conference of county officers of the State, said, in part: "One of the worst plague spots left on the West, in respect to typhoid fever in the United States, is Niagara Falls. In 1906 the death rate from this disease ranged from 102.9 to 183.4 per hundred thousand in the decade of 1897-1907."

MURRAY TECH EDITOR.

Joseph I. Murray, '12, of Everett, has been elected sporting editor of the Daily Tech, the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, succeeding Wellesley J. Scliggman, '11, of Brookline.

WARD 17 HAS FINE TIME AT CURLEY BALL

Ward 17 got up late to-day. For nearly everybody in Ward 17 was the guest last night of Alderman "Jim" Curley and the Tammany leaders at Intercolonial Hall, Cohasset. The rumor spreaders did not appear during an intermission between dances.

Alderman "Jim" Hale came over from Jamaicaway Ward 11, and his companion in the dance, Miss Julia O'Brien, made an original "Hit." Secretary Dowling of the Finance Commission was in the holidays, but he somehow kept away from the Tammanyites.

Representative "Jerry" Good and Councilmen Francis H. Brendan, John B. Connors, Larry Cunningham, "Tom" McMunn and other Tammany chieftains served on the reception committee and kept the braves and their squaws busy. Everybody was happy save only the small bosses in Ward 17.

President Francis L. Daley refused to politics on the ground that he was not on the inside for the grand march, and pleaded to Mayor Fitzgerald for a seat next month. The ex-Mayor was accompanied by Mrs. Fitzgerald, radiant in a gown of gray de soie silk, trimmed with panne velvet. Then followed Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell and Miss Fitzgerald, Judge Henry S. Dewey and Miss Julia Noonan, Alderman Thomas Gilson and Miss Bertha Dewey, Alderman Joseph Mullen Hale and Miss Julia O'Brien, Alderman John J. Kirby and Miss Mary Delia Connellman, Frank B. Crane and Miss May O'Brien and fifty other couples.

Judge Dewey led the march after the grand march and then everybody danced until 12 o'clock, and the merry-making of the day that they danced with Fitzgerald, a dance which was originated by the right honorable with Roosevelt's friend, "Matt" Hale, said at the dance that other cards are telling what lovely dancers are Congressman O'Connell, Aldermen Curley and Gilson, Judge Dewey and others of proud fame.

Curley made some hay while the sun was shining, for he had some nominating papers with him and induced about all of the eligibles to sign them.

ELY CENTRAL STOCK HAS SLIGHT GAIN

Following yesterday's break in Ely Central, the stock recovered some to-day on the strength of a statement put out by the H. B. Shaffers Company, promoters of Ely Central, Rawhide Coalition and Round Consolidated. The statement was a reprint of an article in the Engineering and Mining Journal, which is believed to have caused the slump in 14 cents. Some of those who had sold on the slump bought the day and the stock opened at $1 and went to $1.56½.

The article has been boomed by George Graham Rice, who has served a sentence in a New York prison. He accumulated 500,000 shares, which was boosted to $3 and $4.25. The Engineer and Mining Journal said that the stock was purchased at 50 cents, and further attacked the property. Nat Goodwin, the actor, is credited with Rice and appears as vice-president of his brokerage house.

SPLENDID FICTION FREE. "The Invisible Wound," by Morris Jokai, will appear in the Sunday American.

TO DRAW LOT TO FIX PLACE UPON BALLOT

An innovation of great importance was announced to-day by the Election Commissioners when they sent out word that candidates for Mayor, City Council and School Committee will draw lots to decide the position of their names on the ballot for the coming city election on January 11.

Heretofore names of candidates have been placed on the ballot in alphabetical order. This has resulted, especially in the Board of Aldermen, in the election of men whose names began with the first few letters of the alphabet.

The new system of drawing lots will give everyone an equal chance, and, it is hoped by the Election Commissioners, will do away with the handicap which has resulted in those whose names appeared to begin with letters low in the alphabet.

As soon as all candidates have filed their papers, the commissioners will announce the date and place for the drawing of lots.

SEEK CHURCHMAN'S DOUBLE AS THIEF

MOUNT HOLLY, N. J., Nov. 11.—The belief that William Hamilton, the wealthy farmer who was arrested, charged with having robbed the safe of his friend and neighbor, Joseph Allen, of $2,000 in Lawrence, is a double who is the real robber, has resulted in the setting of Hamilton at liberty.

The search for the alleged double, who is said to be a former well-known criminal officer in the United States army, will be prosecuted vigorously, and it is confidently asserted by Prosecutor Atkinson and County Detective Parker that when he is caught the mystery of the safe robbery will have been solved.

"DEATH TREATMENT" NEW CHARGE IN STETSON CASE

Most Astounding Revelation Yet Made in Connection with Christian Science Church Dissension.

That Mrs. Augusta F. Stetson, deposed leader of the First Church of Christ Scientist, of New York, threw upon her the "death thought" in the form of an icy blast which was imminent with fatest of the dead and through which she could see the eyes of Mrs. Stetson, was the formal accusation made before the trustees of the Mother Science Church in Boston last July by Mrs. Maude Kissam Babcock, former student and fellow practitioner of Mrs. Stetson.

This accusation is the most astounding revelation that has been made in connection with the controversy that resulted in Mrs. Stetson's deposition from the New York church following charges of improper practice.

Mrs. Babcock is a cousin of the late William H. Vanderbilt, Sr., and of the late Carrol Hayward, who was a chamberlain of Pope Leo XIII.

Gave All To Church.

She declares that the "death treatment" was given her by Mrs. Stetson after she had impoverished herself by gifts to the New York Christian Science Church. She says the last $10,000 of her independent fortune she gave toward the organ in the New York church and that two years ago, by reason of her gifts she was driven to secure employment in a New York department store. She went without food on one occasion for four days because Mrs. Stetson would give her no money.

Mrs. Babcock came to Boston at the request of Archibald McLellan and John V. Dittemore, trustees of the Mother Church to whom she had related her story in New York. She repeated her accusation here and says that at the end of her recital two of the trustees of the Mother Church were weeping. They thanked her for what she had done for them and for Christian Science and asked her as a further proof of her devotion to the church to face Mrs. Stetson. "I welcome the opportunity," Mrs. Babcock says she replied and the afternoon of the same day she faced Mrs. Stetson before the board. The meeting was most dramatic.

"Death Treatment" at Midnight.

Mrs. Babcock declares that the "death treatment" was given her at midnight February 13, 1902. It came after she had given the last of her property to Mrs. Stetson, she declares. She had even given Mrs. Stetson the deed to her house.

"I went up to her and put my arm around her neck. 'I love you, Mrs. Stetson,' I said. 'I am the most faithful of your students, and I urge you to give up the task of leadership.' We went down the hall of her home with our arms around each other and I had good-by, leaving the deed to my home in her possession. That was the afternoon of February 13, 1902.

"That night in Cedarhurst, L. I., at midnight, I got the death treat-ment."

Then follows Mrs. Babcock's description of the dreadful experience. She continued:

"The only thing that seemed to relieve me from the death agony through which I was passing was to read my Testament. I refrained from reading 'Science and Health,' because Mrs. Stetson had told me during the afternoon that I was disloyal to Mrs. Eddy. Why, then, was I not given a chance to defend myself before a duly constituted tribunal of my church?

"When some time afterward I asked Mrs. Stetson why this dreadful thing had happened to me, she said, 'God smote you because you lifted your voice against the holy One of Israel,' meaning Mrs. Eddy.

Second "Death Treatment."

"I was attacked at night when I was supposed to be off guard and defenseless.

"Before a number of people in the Hotel Touraine just prior to the June communion in 1903 Mrs. Stetson said: 'I had to leave Mrs. Eddy to lead off in her own truth, and she might have passed out, but God triumphed and she is here with us to-day.'

"I received a second death treatment, ten days after the first. The morning following this second treatment I said to my husband: 'Is Mrs. Stetson right, or am I right?' He replied: 'Mrs. Stetson is right,' though he was not a Christian Scientist, and up to that time had always opposed her. I said: 'God speaks to me through you.' And I went to New York and told Mrs. Stetson that I would take back the deed to my house and sell it, and give her the proceeds.

Sold House for Church.

I advertised the house for sale, and pending the discovery of a purchaser accepted an offer from Riccardo de Acosta for $14000 for rent for the Summer months. I received a check from Mr. Acosta for the total rent in advance, and was foolish enough to mention in the reading room of the church that I had it in my pocketbook. The same afternoon I was told Mrs. Stetson wanted to see me. I waited for her, and when she came in she began complimenting me on my gown, but I asked her directly what she wanted. She said the church was very poor and needed money, and that she thought I might want to pay something toward my debt before the June communion. I replied that I would be glad to do so, but that I only had $1,000 in cash, and that I must hold this to meet bills against the house that I expected to come in. She replied not to worry about them, that God would enable me to demonstrate for the amounts when they were presented.

Pawned Engagement Ring.

Within a few days, in checks of $200, $500 and $500 each, I had given her for the church that $1,000. Then a bill against the house came in, and Mr. Creditor refused to wait, and threatened to sue me.

"I beseeched Mrs. Stetson to give me back some of the money I had paid or to ask the trustees to do it, but she refused and said I was very selfish to ask her to take her mind off the church.

"Finally on my despair I pawned my engagement ring for $100 with a jewelry firm of which Mrs. Stetson's nephew, Harold Simpson, is a member. I notified the creditor and stood off the suit.

"My house was sold for $12,000 cash. After I had paid a commission that was extorted from me and satisfied some liens against the house I did not have money enough to pay my entire debt to the church. You see, I had paid the $1,000 I speak of and two small sums, $20 and $200, for which I show you receipts, so I sold my household effects.

HOW DEATH TREATMENT FELT.

"At midnight I was awakened by an icy blast sweeping through the windows. My teeth chattered. My heart fluttered. Luminous waves rolled toward me covered with the faces of the dead. I felt like a man being electrocuted. It seemed indeed that my soul went from my body; that I saw through the walls of the house. AND IN THIS HOUR OF AGONY I SAW MRS. STETSON'S BLUE EYES ALL AROUND THE ROOM.

"Staggering to the bathroom, I drew a tub of steaming hot water and got into it, but I could not feel the temperature of the water. I was as cold in it as during the first moments when the icy blast of the death treatment enveloped me. I was wrestling, 'not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places.'—Phil. vi, 12.

"As I sat there my husband staggered up the stairs and into my room.

"'MY GOD,' HE EXCLAIMED, 'WHAT HAS HAPPENED TO ME. COMING OUT ON THE TRAIN I FELT AS IF I WERE GOING TO DIE. I AM SUFFOCATING.'"—Mrs. Babcock's description of "death treatment."

New Hair Treatment.

The air is full of floating dust, dirt and disease germs, which get into your hair. There is a natural oil on your head that holds the dust fast, and in a short time you have dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair. The pores in your scalp are stopped up, the hair roots get no nourishment, and then your hair begins to fall out. Cleanliness is the one thing needed. Tonics, renewers, invigorators and hair growers do not and can not remove the dirt that causes the trouble. You need Birt's Head Wash, the new scientific preparation. This will put the hair and scalp in a healthy, natural condition, so that faded, lifeless hair resumes its natural color. There is no alcohol or ammonia in it, so they are said to make hair turn gray prematurely. Birt's Head Wash is made of Refined Soap, Cocoanut Oil, White of Eggs, Glycerine and Salicylic Acid. There are no better things than these known for cleansing the hair and scalp, and any doctor will tell you so if you ask him. Don't use common soaps and shampoos. They often contain too much alkali, and that is one of the most harmful things you can put on your head.

IVERNIA IN; BRINGS MANY BOSTONIANS

The Cunard liner Ivernia, Captain Potter, from Liverpool, with 482 passengers, and the Navigazione Generale Italiana liner Lazio, Captain Pio, from Genoa and Naples, with 479 passengers, docked today at the new Cunard pier, East Boston.

Both vessels arrived off Boston light late last night and anchored out there. Because of a heavy fog they did not try to get up the harbor until the mist had well lifted to-day.

This is the first trip of the Italian vessel to this port. The Navigazione Generale Italiana Company has just put a line into operation between this and Italian ports. Vessels will come here at first monthly.

Aboard the Ivernia were several well-known Boston people. Eugene N. Foss, recent candidate on the Democratic ticket for Lieutenant-Governor, was at the pier to greet his wife and his two sons, Benjamin F. and Noble. The young men have just completed a trip around the world. They left here, going westward, last January. They met Mrs. Foss in Berlin last July. Mr. Foss said that his sons' holiday was over now and that he was going to put them to work.

Mrs. Franklin Gordon Dexter of the Back Bay was another cabin passenger. Miss Edith R. Wills, who was to be married to the late Captain Nathaniel Appleton, with her mother, returned after a prolonged European tour. George L. Wilson, formerly of Boston, but now of London, completed his fifty-fourth passage across the Atlantic to-day.

PRIZE WINNERS OF DRESS AND HAT TRIMMING CONTESTS will be announced in the Sunday American.

NEW TRIUMPH FOR DUCHESS OF AUSTRIA

BERLIN, Nov. 11.—Archduke Franz Ferdinand, heir to the Austrian throne, arrived here to-day, accompanied by his morganatic wife, the Duchess Sofie of Hohenberg. The couple is to visit the Kaiser.

This step is the latest triumph in the remarkable rise of the woman who as Sophie Chotek wed the archduke. The marriage was morganatic and Ferdinand was compelled to renounce the throne before the ceremony was permitted.

Little more than a month ago the wife of the archduke was elevated from countess to duchess. This was the most important even in her career and presages her eventual rise to the throne with Ferdinand. It is said that the Kaiser's intervention brought about her elevation, he having demanded that she come to Berlin with her husband.

The Emperor Francis Joseph took the move only after he had for nine years fought against it. Duchess Sophie is the leader of the clerical party. Ferdinand's ascension to the throne is now practically assured, and when he and his morganatic wife reign, wholesale progressive plans will be carried out, according to the belief of European diplomats.

Ferdinand is now the active head of the Austrian and Hungarian governments. Great honors are planned for the regent pair while they are in Berlin. The Kaiser is working for a close Germania Austrian alliance.

SUGAR TRUST CALLED THIEF; 3 MEN QUIT

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—Following the latest disclosures of $30,000,000 frauds by the Sugar Trust, three officials of the Havemeyer refineries in Williamsburg resigned to-day. They are James F. Bendernagel, general superintendent; John James, chief engineer, and William Fleming, chief of construction. Their places will be filled with men from the Philadelphia plant of the American Sugar Refining Company.

In a seven-column article headed "Sugar Trust, Constant Thief," the Sun says to-day:

"The Sugar Trust has stolen boldly and enormously, as the subjoined article shows from the United States Treasury for at least twenty years. It stole with the assistance of officials employed by the United States. It was nursed and protected in its stealing by powerful politicians.

"The direct evidence of the Sugar Trust's crimes has lain in the New York custom house since the stealing began. Practically every payment of duty on sugar made by the trust bears on its face the evidence of robbery, the true weight and the false.

"Those who knew that the Sugar Trust was a thief and who sought for legal proof in the custom house records were referred to the thief itself.

"George B. Cortelyou, Jr., offered to lay bare the Sugar Trust's full inquiry to President Roosevelt and Attorney-General Bonaparte. Mr. Earle was refused and left in complete discouragement. For one year after that the Sugar Trust continued to steal.

"The facts show that the Sugar Trust could not have stolen upward of $30,000,000 without the cognizance of treasury officials and the patronage of politicians. The same cargoes were weighed and underweighed.

BAPTIST FORM IDOLATROUS, IS FAUNCE'S IDEA

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—President Faunce of Brown University, who was formerly a pastor in this city, made a speech that stirred the Baptists at the congress of that church in the Madison avenue church last night. The topic under discussion was the open communion.

"Baptists face a crisis," said the speaker. "Unity is in the air and is pressing on us. What stands in our way, is our Baptist way? I know a dozen Baptist pastors who are not talking, and for the same reason. Dr. Hanley of the First Church of Providence is not. They agree with him. Hamilton stands in our way of union. Baptists of to-day are not following after the practices of the fathers. They were independent. Many of us are slaves to a form.

"We condemn holy water, incense and all other forms of literalism as idolatry. It is the right thing to do. Our immersion belongs with them, and when we cling to form we are as idolatrous as the rest. Practically everybody outside our ranks thinks we lay greater stress upon immersion, a form. Our services in missions and many other lines are forgotten. We must disabuse these learned minds that we run to a ritual instead of to real spiritual life.

The speaker said he wished 100 Baptist ministers would preach next Sunday from the text, "Jesus Himself Baptized Not."

SPRINGFIELD BOY STAR AT KEITH'S

Among the new acts at Keith's Theatre this week is one in which a Springfield youth appears. John T. Ray of Ray and Nice, the dancing and singing sketch team. Their act is entitled "My Friend from Home," and is having its first week on the Keith circuit, after an initial week at Fall's in Springfield.

A Svengali-Trilby hypnotism act, only with a new twist to it, is a feature of their skit. Nice is short and makes up as an absurd Svengali. Ray, who is tall and lanky, is equally eccentric as Trilby, a la Virginia Harned. The act is making a hit.

SALVATION ARMY CALLS FOWLER FOE

That William P. Fowler, chairman of the Overseers of the Poor, in an implacable enemy of the Salvation Army and that he has hedged about its license to collect money for Thanksgiving and Christmas dinners with conditions and regulations calculated to actually put the Army out of business, Attorney Henry W. Jarvis of the Tremont Building declares:

"Chairman Fowler of the Overseers of the Poor is the worst enemy of the Salvation Army in fake city and always has been," said Attorney Jarvis. "He fought the bill to license us to make public collections and secured many of the restrictions heaped in about with conditions which would put us out of business.

"He has never failed to show his animosity to the Army and on a public platform in Fell River he practically denounced the organization. Once a woman approaching the Salvation Army was in his office in the course of her duties and Fowler abused the Army.

"Why, Mr. Fowler, let me explain," said the woman.

"You don't explain in here," he said and he put her out of the office.

"That's the kind of a man we're up against. He dominates the Board of Overseers. He is a rich man and he poses as a philanthropist. He has had an office, he claims, of quite a large sum of money to take up another work, but has refused on the ground that it would interfere with his law practice.

"We will certainly move for remedial legislation before the next Legislature. We will try to have the law amended which now gives the legislature the right to use street collections into the authority of the Overseers of the Poor. It will not only have this authority given to the Street Commissioners, to whom it belongs, but Fowler retains his place as chairman of the overseers and allows no one else a place on the board. He will not do his business. No man can get on the board without his consent.

"An excellent man was suggested to fill the vacancy caused by the death of John H. Colbert. Fowler refused his endorsement of the man and will not let him on the board, but they do exactly what he wants them to do. We will have to find some man unimpeachable to the Salvation Army who will fill Colbert's place.

"The organized Associated Charities are not friendly to the Salvation Army. They opposed the last legislative act subscribed to by the grants. Fowler is always with the Associated Charities. When the Overseers of Fowler was being built no words went to him and none of the subject of the dedication.

"So," he said, "to do everything I can to hurt it? That has been his attitude toward us ever since."

YOUTH ROBBED AND KILLED IN LONELY WOODS

SPRINGFIELD, Nov. 11.—Charles H. White of Erving, a newsboy, who died in the morgue at the Springfield Hospital, the victim of a robbery and murder, one of the most mysterious the local police have ever been called upon to investigate.

Young White came here from his home on Thursday morning. Last Friday afternoon he was found by a woodsman in the lonely woods in the suburbs of this city. He was kneeling from the ear. In one hand was a 22-calibre revolver with one barrel discharged. His money, about $50, had been stolen. He died last night without regaining consciousness.

The police at first declared that he had committed suicide, or that his injuries were due to a fall, but the examination by the surgeons revealed no bullet wound, and it is declared by Medical Examiner E. A. Bates that death was caused by a blow with some hard instrument which fractured the skull.

Struck in Back of the Head.

Just how he came to be in the thicket, who lured him there, struck him the blow back of the ear and robbed him of his money he is known to have on questioned the police have been unable to answer. They have now drawn a theory that the surgeons proved by X-ray examination that there was no bullet in his head, the police supporting the theory.

White had been employed on the tug boat forty-eight hours before he was identified by his father Henry W. White of Erving. As soon as he saw his son and was told the circumstances by the hospital physicians he went directly to the police and told them he did not believe his son had tried to end his life. Assisted by the young man cracked his trunk in Athol immediately morning. The police came to the city at 10:00 o'clock that morning. After viewing White's body they were sure he did this are unknown, but it is supposed he came to the city on the same train.

Rusty Gun in Pocket.

From that time until he was found in the woods Friday afternoon, bleeding from the ear and unconscious, no one has seen him or heard a word from him that would throw any light on the mystery. Where he spent the remainder of the time, and the events that brought him to the lonely spot there are absolutely no clues to. Why any one should be found to was unconscious and bleeding from the ear. The police were at a loss to explain. They said that probably he was attacked and while looking through his pockets for something that would identify him they found a rusty old 22-calibre revolver with one barrel discharged. There was also a razor in a dancing class with the name H. White with them thereon and some small change. The police at once reported the case as an attempt at suicide.

PARENTS ABANDON PRETTY "AMELIA"

Evidently born of refined parentage and yet abandoned to the world, a pretty two months old baby girl is the latest helpless waif to drift into the Charles Street Home. There, the blue-eyed little haired little girl whom Policeman Peter Sullivan found last night on the steps at No. 28 India street, is awaiting some person who wants a pretty baby to call and get her. "Amelia" was the name written on a piece of paper and pinned to the good white coat which baby wore when found sleeping.

EXTRA MATINEE AT MUSIC HALL

Through special request by those unable to devote time in the afternoon and evening to see the Johnson-Kennedy fight pictures, the American Music Hall management has decided to put on an extra matinee to-morrow forenoon at 11 o'clock.

As it takes about an hour to prepare the pictures, this will conclude the matinee in season for those attending to see Gans defend the much discussed final round of the fight when Johnson was knocked down and then put ketched out, and at all their afternoon business.

BUSIEST DAY ON THE WATER FRONT

Today is the busiest day the East Boston water front has known since the big fire of July 11, 1908. There are now five trans-Atlantic liners, two of them passenger vessels, tied up at the new Boston & Albany piers in East Boston.

As out three piers have been completed, the arrival of the five big ships makes things congested. The ships are the Cunarder Ivernia, the staunch Inner Line and the three Leyland freighters, Georgian, from London, and the Ancastrian and Iberian, from Manchester.

Nothing succeeds like circulation. The AMERICAN has quantity and quality.

I had inflammation of the kidneys and also suffered from constipation and torpidity of the liver. I had to take salts every day to move my bowels, and at last they gave out.

"When I commenced on May 6 taking the sample bottle of your medicine and pills I could not get my right arm to my head. I have used twenty bottles of the large size Safe Cure and three boxes of Safe Pills. I described my case to you long ago. MME. BONINSEGNA SCORES GREAT TRIUMPH IN "AIDA"

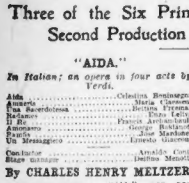
Three of the Six Principals Remarkable in the Second Production by Home Company.

"AIDA."

In Italian; an opera in four acts by Verdi.

Aida	Celestina Boninsegna
Amneris	Maria Claessens
Una Sacerdotessa	Bettina Freeman
Radames	Florindo Lelva
Il Re	Patrick Ambrosini
Amonasro	Pietro Audisio
Ramfis	Jose Mardones
Un Messaggero	Ernesto Dalmonte
Custode	Arnaldo Conti
Etiope	Dalfino Menotti

By CHARLES HENRY MELTZER



"Aida" was produced last night at the Boston Opera House.

In Mr. Russell's place, I might have preferred to produce some other work, contrasting more strongly than "Aida" with "La Gioconda," which we had heard two nights before.

But then again, who knows?

I might have done it. Mr. Russell did. For the production of an opera depends on many things, among noted by the patrons of opera. On the health of artists, on their ability to sing on certain dates, on the results of the rehearsals needed for the public performance of this work or that, and on mere accidents.

Thanks to its intention to destroy (or at least discourage the old star system, I may be less difficult for the management of the new Boston house to do as it pleases in the arrangement of its repertory than it has often been in older and, as yet, more noted theatres.

Doubtless good reasons led Mr. Russell to give us "Aida" at his second performance, rather than "Lakme," which we shall hear on Friday, or "La Boheme," which has been promised for this evening.

A Glorious Work.

It is a glorious work. But at this stage of our acquaintance with the lyric repertory, it is not easy to say much of it that will seem new. What true things may be told about "Aida" must seem trite—to the majority of music-lovers.

And yet—and yet—even in Boston, is it to sure that we have all had the great joy of listening to the music of "Aida"? Have we all so familiar with the tragedy which it unfolds, and with the story of the first sensational presentation of the opera by the Egyptian Khedive forty-odd just forty—years ago, in Cairo?

My extreme youth and, incidentally, Ismail Pacha's omission to send me an invitation, prevented my attending the Egyptian premiere.

In later years, when I at last saw with my own eyes the house for which "Aida" was composed, I marvelled at the pass they made over the spectacular grandeur of the original production.

The proportions of the Opera House are insignificant by comparison with those of the Khedivial Theatre.

Most Promising of Operas.

Still later, when Verdi, the master who invented the wonderful opera, revised its performance of his work in Paris, by great luck I accompanied Maestro Muzio, who had acted as conductor in Cairo, to the hotel of the composer and with a small group of his admirers, presented him with a golden laurel wreath. It was impudent. Nay, it was more than impudent. Youth has its subtleties. I am sometimes glad now that my timidity did not stop me from expressing my approval of the master.

But to return.

"Aida," perhaps, of all Verdi's operas, has the best hope of remaining popular. Not that, in my humble judgment, it is the highest, the greatest, or the most beautiful of his achievements. Many would rank it lower than his "Falstaff." And for my own part, I should think it insane to speak of it in the same breath as "Otello."

De gustibus

To the masses, who, after all determine the fate of most operas, "Aida" is by far the most fascinating of the later works of Verdi. Fully as fascinating to them now as "Trovatore," "Traviata," "Rigoletto" and "La Forza del Destino" were to an earlier generation.

It has color, warmth, excitement, contrast, noise to make it popular. It is spectacular to a fault. It is dramatic thirty now and then, too, as in this climax and that. In this phrase and that, has it a trace of the vulgarity which at moments disfigured his earlier works.

And, as a whole, the work is beautiful. The sentiment with which Verdi, though no longer young at the time, informed the love music of Radames, the Egyptian warrior, and Aida, the Princess of Ethiopia, has accents like the accents of no other opera. The vigor and passion which mark the music of Amonasro, the enslaved Ethiopian King, are remarkable. The skill with which Verdi has mastered the art of effective choral writing is extraordinary. It is striaking in order to make an impression, like Meyerbeer, is in itself admirable.

Then, even as "La Gioconda" does, "Aida" affords great opportunities for the display of excellent voices and for industrious chorus singing, and for duets for picturesque settings, beauteous groupings, vivid ballets.

Scenery Aided Success

All these we found last night, too, at the Boston Opera House. The "production" of "Aida" by Mr. Russell, and his expert henchman, Mr. Menotti, aided by the painter of the scenery, Mr. Strappa (of the Scala), was largely responsible for the unquestionable success of the opera.

Never, till last night, had we seen a palace as regal and as impressive or charming in color as were revealed by the lights in the first act last night.

By comparison, I thought the scene at the entrance to the City of Thebes, which does duty as a background for Radames in his "Triumph" scene, a trifle rude. But the foreground was so artfully and tastefully filled up with the moving figures of dancers, the dresses of those dancers, by Mr. Menotti—rose green, and cream and lavender—were delightful.

And it was worth noting that some of the best effects in the monumental scenes in "Aida" were illusions attained—not by ridiculous expense. The ceiling seemed admired some nights ago in the New Theatre production of "Antony and Cleopatra," in New York, but with mere paint and canvas. This was true of the color and bold real walls and columns, if he will pay close attention, are admirable. The fresh and palette and cloth is more praiseworthy. Fox, as Count Cosmello, the great French comedian, once said to me:

"On the stage, Mercadet, nothing should be real."

But my enthusiasm about the "production" must not make me forgetful of the performances.

Finest Aido on Boards.

In some respects it was equal to that of "La Gioconda," two nights ago. In others it fell short of it. Of the six principals concerned in the interpretation, three were quite remarkable.

Celestina Boninsegna, though new to Boston, is no stranger to New York. Four years ago she sang twice or thrice at the Metropolitan.

Her voice was then as vibrant, fresh and pure as it appeared last night. It is a voice which have never been exploited—they may have had opportunity to do with the peculiarities of her make-up (she has since discarded them) or with the intrigues of her long-established rivals—though she was then, as with Mr. Russell I believe her now, one of the very finest Aidas on the boards. She was feted and made the rather unreasonable New Yorkers and sent back to Italy. She was impudent. Nay, it was more than impudent. Youth has its subtleties. I am sometimes glad now that my timidity did not stop me from expressing my approval of the master.

But to return.

"Aida," perhaps, of all Verdi's operas, has the best hope of remaining popular. Not that, in my humble judgment, it is

CELESTINA BONINSEGNA, OPERA STAR

MISS NIELSEN AND CONSTANTINO HEAD THE CAST TO-NIGHT

Alice Nielsen and Constantino will head the cast of "La Boheme" which the Boston Opera Company will give tonight. This is the first of the fifteen extra performances on Thursday nights and the setting of this performance for the debut of Miss Nielsen with the new company shows the character of the extra season performances.

When Henry Russell came to Boston with the San Carlo Opera Company nearly three years ago he had experienced a season which had been artistically but not financially successful. The company was to sail in two weeks and in the mean time Mr. Russell engaged the Park Theatre, which had just ended its season. He had with him the virtuous donna left, Nielsen, and in order to make the season possible he heroically offered to sing at every performance. Constantino was the tenor.

Had Miss Nielsen not developed permanently injuring her voice by singing every day the San Carlo Opera Company could not have performed, Boston would never had heard Mr. Russell's acquaintance and the Boston Opera House would now be as far from reality as it was then.

So quite as much as to Mr. Russell and Mr. Jordan, Boston owes a debt of gratitude to Alice Nielsen. To-night will be the first opportunity to repay her, and from all accounts her appearance on the stage will be the signal for a great ovation.

Raymond Bonheur, a French baritone of whom Mr. Russell has a very high opinion, will make his debut as Marcello. This part requires a singer of exceptional ability. The dainty, frolicsome role of Mercedes has been entrusted to Matilde Lewicka, a Polish mezzo-soprano of considerable reputation. Mardones, the Spanish bass, will sing Colline, and John Morgan will make his debut as Alcindoro.

Society Women and Gowns at Second Night of Opera

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

As the prettily, upholstered boxes, like so many jewel caskets one after the other was filled last night, for the second evening of Grand Opera, one could hardly help the little gasp of surprise which escaped at the gorgeous display of gowns and jewels and they weren't the same as those worn Monday night either—despite the prophecy of the social arbiter, Madame Boston women know magic of the art of dressing and have such a limited wardrobe as to necessitate the wearing of the same gown to all the important functions of the season.

In fact it was agreed upon by many that the "second night" last night was far more dazzling than that at the initial performance.

It was surely a gala night and every seat in the vast auditorium was occupied.

As the gay throngs entered, out their friends, greeting acquaintances and carried on to their seats, the women in all the glory of the newest frocks and the most expensive in jewels, and the men following meekly after in their correct though sombre garb. I wondered if they—the men—ever looked with envy upon the gala attire of femininity and didn't bear bor some secret cravings for more varied clothing.

Men Look Pathetic.

Do they ever long to break forth from the bondage of their rigidly conventional and uncomfortable looking—attire into the brilliance of color?

It surely is a pathetic thought—but most men look pathetic in evening dress.

Imagine, for instance, the hundreds of stately gentlemen who night after night trail along after the dames and damsels of fashion, to the opera, in their immaculate black who may be concealing beneath their shiny hats a burning desire to burst out suddenly, like great butterflies from their chrysalides in the magnificence of rich velvets and satins, with pinned caps upon their heads (they would doubtless be willing plumes at that) and their comely legs exploiting in the freedom of silken hose.

What a triumph it would be over their women kind and what a garden of color the opera house would be then, and what joy it would be to describe their attire.

But, even with the men serving merely as a background there is enough of gorgeousness and beauty to be on such an occasion as the opera that one naturally looks for favorite beauties. Mrs. Charles S. Bird, the silver-haired mother of two of the handsomest girls in town, was a vision that is perfect in contour and color, who is seen to pioneer the handsomest matrons in Boston, Mrs. Gordon Abbott, 2d, considered by other women the loveliest in "the Beauty Book," which is said to have been compiled by a member of the Vincent Club. Mrs. Bayard Thayer and Mrs. Bryce Allen, each classic and bewitching in the elaborate gowns, and Mrs. Alfred Codman, who usually wears rich satins vivid in color and perfect in style.

Most Superb of Matrons.

But many there are when one pauses to choose from a gallery of memory pictures the most superb of the American matrons who are social leaders in Boston. And for the buds—most of the débutantes this year have bloomed twice, first along the North Shore in the great country residences and again in town, so that may secure for the ease and grace with which they bear themselves at the opera when they appear in public, and making an interesting of the "buds," summing up their attractions as to face, grace and manner.

They are the shining marks for the opera glass battalion, but seem to mind it not the least.

Miss Dorothy Draper, the daughter of the Governor, and by right of beauty, wealth and social standing was by far the most attractive of the boxy last night. She came with her brother, Bristow Draper, and his wife, and was radiantly young in her Paris frock of turquois blue which became her dark beauty vastly.

She was one of the most enthusiastic applauders and during the entire performance held the strictest attention to the opera.

Nordica Lavishly Gowned.

Miss Dorothy Jordan, the petite blonde daughter of the Eben Jordans, who, with a very charming grace, was allowing herself to be lionized, was a picture in her clinging gown of pink satin, trimmed with crystal and a dog-collar of pearls that she occupied the box with her mother and father. Mrs. Jordan was in a handsome creation of white satin and lace, with diamond ornaments.

For the greater part of the evening the Jordans had as a guest in their box Miss Nordica, who was quite the most lavishly gowned of any woman present.

During the first act she sat in one of the loges with a family party including Mrs. George A. Walker, Mrs. E. Del Castillo and Mrs. William F. Baldwin, but at the end of the act Mr. Jordan escorted her to his box, where she was most heartily welcomed.

The bodice of her gown, a decollete creation of spangled black chiffon over tulle, secured carried with diamonds, while the same jewel glistened in the beautiful turn of her shapely head.

There was a general stir when it was first whispered about, that Mme. Nordica was there, and every eye was turned in her direction. She was most enthusiastic in her praise of the performance.

Mrs. Lowell's Gown.

Next to Mme. Nordica's gown, perhaps the most striking one there, was that worn by Mrs. Guy Lowell, who has just returned from New York, where she attended the wedding of her brother, Andrew Robeson Sargent, to Maria de Acosta.

It was of gold spangled lace cut very low and worn on the lines of the directoire. She wore a necklace of pearls and diamonds her jewels.

Mrs. S. Parker Brewer was among the handsomest of the very young matrons present. Her gown, quite in A mode, was thought by many to eclipse her.

Mrs. Brewer arrived early with a party of friends, and was a picture in her clinging gown of pale blue satin and her diamond necklace.

Mrs. Shaw, who as Nauem Mirebell was generally conceded the beauty of her set, was in a most lovely gown of rose glitter, than ever in her handsomely modelled gown of pale blue chiffon and her corsage bouquet of orchids. Though she owns some exceptionally handsome jewels, she wore none last night, and simplicity seemed the keynote of her attire.

Mrs. Charles S. Bird, who entertained in her box, wore an exceptionally handsome gown of silver velvet. The train which is a curtaining picture and while receiving in her box she was quite unaware that she interested herself in each caller with her accustomed sweetness and tact.

Miss Priscilla Stackpole was a centre of much interest as she walked about through the corridor during the intermission and chatted with her numerous admirers. She wore a trained gown of flowered chiffon and a few well placed jewels.

"Beau" Porter, with whom she chatted for some time, was in his element and I have never seen her looking lovelier. She wore white satin embroidered in pale pink roses, with a deep flounce of embroidered chiffon.

Dorothy Forbes was another of the

"LA BOHEME."

La Italian; an opera in four acts by Puccini.

Mimi	Alice Nielsen
Musetta	Matilde Lewicka
Rodolfo	Fiorenzo Constantino
Marcello	Raymond Bonheur
Colline	Jose Mardones
Schaunard	Attilio Parisi
Alcindoro	John Morgan
Benoit	Luigi Tasselia
Un Doganiere	Giorgio Dunaj
Parigoul	C. Grosso
	Grand Corps de Ballet.
Musical Director	Arnaldo Conti
Regisseur-General	Dalfino Menotti

"La Boheme" was composed by Puccini, who is generally considered the most living Italian composer. His "La Tosca" has become one of the standard works and his latest opera, "Madama Butterfly," which has several American characters in it, is rapidly becoming very popular.

"La Boheme" was first performed in Turin in 1896, so that it is a comparatively modern opera, and it certainly reflects the operatic tendencies of the day. Puccini is the leader of the Young Italian school of whom Mascagni and Leoncavallo are distinguished examples.

It is interesting to know that Puccini is now engaged upon an opera based upon the play, "The Girl of the Golden West."

"La Boheme" is a tone poem. The orchestration is wonderfully vivid and carries the singers along the slips on the ven. The singers declaim through a mesh of harmony save when they soar into some beautiful melody, which is frequent enough to please those who object to too much orchestration.

Henri Murger's "La Vie de Boheme" gave Puccini the idea for his opera. The scene is laid in the Latin Quarter of Paris about 1830. The first act discloses the student's garret of Rodolfo and Marcello, where the two students are burning their literary works in order to keep warm. There is a knock at the door and Mimi enters to ask a light. She lodges in the same house and has dropped her key on the landing. Rodolfo lights a candle and they search.

In their search their hands meet and they clasp each other. Rodolfo draws her into the room and tells her of his love. She confesses at him. Through the open window and the students in the street see them together and applaud the new alliance.

The second act is outside the cafe of Momus on Christmas eve. There is much merrymaking of students and their mistresses and the waiters are kept busy. The orchestra is delightfully reflects the jollity of the singers.

Musetta arrives accompanied by her lover, an elderly man and rich. They sit opposite the group of students. Mimi, Rodolfo and Marcello.

Musetta had once been Marcello's mistress but she left him for her wealthy admirer. Now she regrets the jolly life of the students and decides to join them.

In spite of the presence of her affinity she does so and horrifies him by compelling him to pay the bill of the entire party. A procession of soldiers with a band is approaching and comes nearer. A body of troops march across the stage and the students fall in behind and rush gaily away.

Mimi arrives in the third act. Mimi has consumption. Rodolfo, overwhelmed at her suffering, is preparing to desert her because he cannot help her. She overhears his plan and drags herself away.

In the fourth act the student's garret is seen again and they are still penniless. Mimi is a knock at the door and Mimi appears. She is dying and she asks for shelter. They lay her upon the bed and Musetta, who has come in, rushes out to the pawnbroker's with her jewels and trinkets to buy wine and bread for the sufferer.

Mimi revives for some with new disease and starvation and perishes in Rodolfo's arms.

MEYER'S NAVY PLAN APPROVED BY TAFT

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Secretary Meyer's plans for the reorganization of the navy have received presidential sanction. He met the President at Richmond and outlined to him his scheme. The President approved all of Mr. Meyer's plans, and this will form the basis for the report of the Secretary of the Navy to the coming session of Congress.

Accumulation of Gas In The Stomach

One of The Most Common Symptoms of Dyspepsia and Deranged Digestion

The presence of a small quantity of gas in the alimentary canal may be described as constituting the ordinary condition, as certain foods, such as peas, beans, etc., naturally eliminate and create gas while undergoing digestion.

It is only when this gas accumulates to such an extent as to cause inconvenience, and belching, that a person may be said to be suffering from flatulence. This collection of gas becomes in extreme cases so great that a swelling presents itself in the pit of the stomach; and when this stage is reached, complaint is made that this part feels tender to the touch, the clothes of the person being loosened to obviate the distress occasioned by pressure.

Attempts are usually made to get rid of this stomach gas by eructation, and immediate relief is sometimes obtained when this is accomplished. Infants are very subject to flatulence, especially when their natural food is taken away too hastily, and when food other than that provided for them by nature is given them. Mothers and nurses are familiar with this infantile trouble, and have various remedies for it, the most popular of which is charcoal, which relieves the trouble completely, by absorbing the stomachic and intestinal gases, thereby remedying the colicky pains of the infant, which is the symptom which most frequently causes the nightly crying spells.

Charcoal is a marvelous absorbent, and is capable of oxidizing and absorbing one hundred times its own volume in gases. It is applicable in all cases of flatulence or gas in the stomach, and as it is entirely harmless, it can be taken by any one, with comparative impunity and without fear of its doing any harm whatever to the system.

Infants and old people can use it as readily as young persons and those in the prime of life, and nothing but benefit can result from its use. It can also be used in any quantity, and in this respect it differs from drugs sometimes employed for stomach troubles, as the dosage of these must be regulated by a competent physician. Not so with charcoal, however, as it is shown by the fact that a French surgeon used as much as fifteen ounces per day, every day of the last thirty years of his life.

Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges should be employed in all cases where the stomach is filled with gases resulting from the fermentation and decomposition of food and also from the use of those vegetable foods which seem naturally to engender and promote the accumulation of gas. These wonderful little lozenges, which have an enormous and ever-increasing sale, are made from best willow charcoal, combined with pure honey, and furnish to the sufferer from stomach gases and foul breath, the very best and most palatable and delightful form in which charcoal can be administered to the stomach.

Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges are exceedingly agreeable to the taste, in striking contrast and contra-distinction to the ordinary powdered charcoal, which is a most unpleasant dose to take. Purchase a package of Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges today from your druggist for 25 cents, and send us your name and address for free sample package. Address F. A. EIGHT DRIVEN FROM HOME IN WALTHAM FIRE

WALTHAM, Nov. 11.—Seven persons fled in their night clothing from a smoke-choked building early to-day while fire in an adjoining structure did damage estimated at $23,000.

The fire started, supposedly from defective electrical insulation, in the Dill building on Main street. The structure, a two-story brick, is owned by he Dill estate. The damage to the building is $8,000.

The George I. Kelley clothing firm lost $8,000 in goods and fixtures; the F. H. Graves Furniture Company lost $6,000 on goods and the Woolworth store lost $1,000.

Mrs. Marie Headrahan, her two daughters, Lucy and Agnes, herson Albert and a roomer, Miss Mary Mash, lives on the third floor of the three-story frame building at No. 153 Mosely street and adjoining the Dill block. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bent occupy the first floor.

When the fire broke out Policeman Morgan roused the occupants of the tenement building. They hurried at in their night clothes, but returned indoors when they found their homes were on fire.

ROCKEFELLER AND JEFFRIES IN GLOVE ACT

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—John D. Rockefeller, with his secretary, occupied two second orchestra seats in the Plazza Music Hall last night. Mr. Rockefeller occupied an isle seat in the main block, four rows from the stage. He was there to see that other great American, James J. Jeffries, but apparently he enjoyed the rest of the show like a boy let out of school.

A few seats away was another notable, John D.—namely John D. Crimmins.

Then as Jeffries skipped into the ring in time of the "Reuben Row" and shadow boxed to the air of "Come Down, Lay, You Berkey," and worked the pulleys to the "Merry Widow Waltz" and leaned back on a chair, touching the ground with his head for sixty or seventy times, to the air of "Ah Want You, Nah Honey, Dead I Do," Mr. Rockefeller laughed and clapped his hands.

And when Sam Berger donned the mitts with Jeffries for three three-minute rounds and the big fighters feinted and countered and sidestepped and jabbed and crossed and parried there was no more of the mighty clever look cast on Mr. Rockefeller.

"How did you enjoy yourself, Mr. Rockefeller?" was asked as he was leaving the show.

"Very much, indeed," said he.

"What do you think of Jeffries?"

"He's a great man—a fine man," said he with much enthusiasm.

WOMAN FLEES AS BANK HEAD DIES IN HOTEL

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—While relatives were searching for him in every corner of New York, Edwin Hills, vice-president of the First National Bank of Philadelphia, Cl, a member of the Connecticut Legislature and a merchant of prominence, was found dead in a room at the Gilsey House, this city.

Three blocks away, at the Hotel Imperial, was Mrs. Hills, in an agony of suspense over her husband's disappearance.

Hills' death was apparently due to natural causes. There were no marks of violence or of drugs, all his money and jewelry were untouched, and, as he is known to have suffered from a weak heart, the presumption is that there was no foul play.

According to the management of the Gilsey House and Coroner George F. Shrady, Mr. Hills entered the Gilsey House with a middle-aged woman, with whom he had been seen there at intervals for the last four years or more.

They registered as "Mr. and Mrs. Charles French," as was their custom. Later the woman, who is only known to the Gilsey House people as the occasional companion of Mr. Hills, left the key at the desk and walked out. Whose she came or where she went, those at the hotel do not know.

Mrs. Hills, at the Imperial, became hysterical over her husband's disappearance and as he had more than $200 in cash and jewelry worth $1,000 with him, she became thoroughly frightened that she telephoned police headquarters and asked that a general alarm be sent out for him.

Mrs. Hills was informed of her husband's death and is prostrated. They came to New York Tuesday and took luncheon at the Hotel Imperial. A short time later her husband left her to keep a business appointment, she said, down town, from which he failed to return early the same afternoon.

John H. Welsch, the dead man's brother-in-law, after identifying Mr. Hills' body, made this statement:

"Mr. Hills died of natural causes. We do not know the woman, who, according to the hotel management, has been going to the Gilsey House with him off and on for four years or more."

Mrs. Hills was sixty-eight years old, and leaves a widow and three children.

He was president of Hills Manufacturing company, vice president of the Plainville National Bank, and vice president of the Business Men's Association.

CLUB WOMEN 1,000 STRONG AT BROCKTON

BROCKTON, Nov. 11.—Nearly 1,000 Massachusetts club women, representing all the women's clubs in the State were in attendance to-day at the autumn meeting of the Massachusetts State Federation. The members of the Brockton Woman's Club were the hostesses at the Porter Church on Main street.

Mrs. Lena I. Hoyt, president of the club, gave the address of welcome, to which Miss Georgia A. Bacon of Worcester, president of the federation, responded.

The general subject of the day was "The City." The three addresses being "Conditions of Congestion in American Cities," by Benjamin C. Marsh; "Significance of the Boston 1915 Movement," by Rev. John Hopkins Denison of Boston, and "The City Beautiful," by Dr. George Kibbin of New York. Mr. Marsh gave many interesting statistics regarding congestion in Chicago, Philadelphia, St. Louis and other cities. He gave as causes and accentuations intensive use of land, long hours of work and low wages, the lack of adequate means of transportation for passengers and freight and the unnecessary concentration of factories.

The statement of some of the causes of congestion indicates rather clearly some of the remedies, said Mr. Marsh. "We must admit the right of the city to control land speculation and to restrict the enormous fortunes made by real estate speculators at the expense of the health and vigor of the community. This will be done most effectively, probably, by a commission form of land and a system of progressive taxation upon increase in land values. We may, however, be obliged to expend as well from taxation the homes of workingmen, where a certain minimum value.

The second remedy would be the enforcement of a minimum rate of wages for any minimum being sufficient to provide for the reasonable subsistence of the workingmen and his family, and the restriction of the hours of work. A third is the provision of suitable means of transportation and regulations governing the location of factories.

Most of our charity and much of our correctional effort to-day is made necessary by conditions which we should prevent and do not. Congestion of population is a disease of selfishness."

Three new clubs were presented for membership during the session. The Gardner Woman's Club, of which Mrs. Helen L. Low ell is president; Ladies' Unity Club, Mrs. Annah F. osgood, and the Springatchi Thursday Club, Mrs. B. A. Hill president.

Carl Lamson gave an organ recital, interspersed with vocal solos by Lawrence E. Shaw, and selections by Mrs. Florence Ferrell, soprano.

MILLION VOLTS IN MAN'S BODY

One million volts of electricity passed through the body of Earl L. Ovington, an electrician, at a special demonstration given at No. 729 Boylston street, to show some of the phenomena which may be expected at the electrics exhibition to be held at Mechanics building from November 15 to 25.

Platinum wire was burned by currents of electricity passing through Mr. Ovington's body; lamps were lighted by similar currents, and there was a singing and talking arc lamp, a wireless telephone and other novelties. The wireless telephone was perhaps the highest type of what may be done with "high frequency" electricity. With only two-fifths of one ampere power Mr. Ovington showed how his new telephone globes, which are connected to no wires of any kind, brought sounds a distance of fifty feet, and even some words at a difference to the path of the electric waves. Mr. Ovington also has with sufficient power lighthouses may be seen miles at a time without difficulty. In the singing arc lamp the inventor explained that the expansion of the arc and the following contraction caused the sound waves to be reproduced in the lamp, although the graphophone causing the lateful sound was fifty feet from where the experiment was made.

The opening of the Electrical Exposition will have as advance heralds decorated electric boats which will be run over the rails of the Boston Elevated road's overhead system. The boats begin their trips tonight. The start will be at 8 o'clock. The route of the boats to-morrow evening will be from Huntington avenue through Washington street to Park square, thence to Copley square and to Massachusetts avenue, where one car will proceed through Cambridge and Arlington, another to Brookline and others to Brighton.

STEEL CASES TO BE RUSHED

In order to facilitate the proceedings in the Steel cases an agreement was made by the lawyers to-day to dispense with the detailed reading of invitations to bid and bids, which are introduced by the Commonwealth for the purpose of identifying signatures.

Thomas G. Hogan, employed by Williams & Bangs of No. 147 Milk street, identified the signatures of John M. Newell, general agent, and D. K. Gordon, New England agent, on a lease by the Canton Bridge Company.

Charles N. Bickey, clerk of the Board of Trade trustees, identified the signature of D. B. Bradlee, president of the Berlin Construction Company, on another lease.

J. Parker Snow, chief engineer of the Boston & Maine, read forty invitations to bid in the effort of the Commonwealth to show a monopoly of steel men.

George A. Follett of Newton, clerk of the H. B. Converse company, identified the signature of H. B. Converse.

An agreement between the District Attorney and counsel for the defence to admit without reading bids made to the city by the defendant companies, with the exception of Canton Bridge Company, the Berlin Construction Company and Chas. Boston Bridge Works, saved several hours at the trial to-day.

The jury was excused while District Attorney Hill and Attorney Choate argued over the admissibility as evidence of the working of the "Boston Agreement" as illustrated in the Brookline bridge bidding.

Five cars were dashed down the cliff into the valley and thirty persons were badly hurt. It is feared that at least five of them will die.

Wad of Money to Back Dartmouth Sent to Boston.

HARVARD IS FAVORITE AT 8 TO 5

By JERE DELANEY.

The first real betting on the football game at the Stadium Saturday between Harvard and Dartmouth was to-day, when a big wad of money, the sum of which was not announced, was carried from Cambridge to Boston. There was considerable talk among the Harvard students to the effect that the good news would be known on Thursday, as it was figured that the Crimson would have an opportunity to wager all their allowances since the opening of the football season.

Nothing was said concerning odds, but a representative of the owners of the coin met in a Washington street hotel and after a little manoeuvring soon got down to business. It was then that the odds of 8 to 5, and those in sight to be the prevailing odds on the day of the game. But no bids other than those made are being given by Harvard supporters, who are backed by the confidence of the games played this year.

The strength of the two teams falls to warrant odds running much beyond 8 to 5, although Harvard looks to have the best chance of beating quarter or even one-third.

Dartmouth is Dangerous.

Any person who has Dartmouth's game at any spot in the Stadium realizes that Captain Green is certainly dangerous and is apt to do as it has done before and pull off some unexpected play that will be the talk of Boston's way until it is the easy happens it will take a harder rally for Harvard to win than it did a year ago when in the last fifteen minutes the Red and Crimson eleven by itself and managed by good football to score the touchdown which won the game.

That rally last year made the Harvard team, and until Yale, but Harvard will this year need in Dartmouth a team that will start with the whistle that will win the game, and if the Harvard eleven is not on its toes from the start they will find themselves on the defensive, and what Dartmouth did against Princeton in the second half last week should make the people offering odds do some thinking, for certainly in the entire game in regard to being so at Harvard.

However, there are those who claim that Dartmouth's coaching on Princeton by Haughton and Dillon was nothing compared to the coaching which Harvard will receive in Boston, and word was sent to Boston from Cambridge this afternoon forward could do little against Princeton. There was considerable talk among the Harvard students to the effect that the good news would be known on Thursday, as it was figured that the Crimson would have an opportunity to wager all their allowances since the opening of the football season.

BETTER DISPLAY AT NEW YORK AUTO SHOW

Since 1905, a complete revolution in the methods of exhibiting automobiles at shows has been made and in each successive year new ideas have been carried to perfect the details. Until that time, and at the show of January of that year, the individual exhibitors were allowed to put up signs of their own design and decorate their booths to suit themselves. The result was an incongruous medley of room and color and the signs, usually bearing the trade marks of the exhibitors, were of so many sizes and shapes that the confusion of details was complete.

Early each year the garden show was held under the auspices of the Association of Licensed Automobile Manufacturers, a committee was appointed to take charge of the show, and make a harmonious exhibition. The sign display, lighting and decorating was generally left in the hands of the show committee. Thereafter, plans for the general layout, signs of uniform size, design and height while the decorating was placed in charge of an expert, and other details were carried out in accordance with the plans of the committee.

Gradually in the board signs bearing the names of the exhibitors were discarded, but even from the signs were not exactly as the show managers wished them to be and gradually was described to decide some plan to make the signs a part of the decorative scheme. The manufactory were the sign posts that were used to carry the exhibits at the show of last year that a similar post will again be used for the forty National Automobile Show in Madison Square Garden, January 6 to 13.

The lamp sign-post will not be of the grotesque variety but will be of good old type and ornamental. It is eight feet high and with its green bonze finish and gently to the Garden decorative scheme. The name of the exhibitor will appear in white letters in red on a white glass background and when illuminated the letters will be distinguishable from one end of the garden to the other. There will be fifty of these lamp sign-posts in the main floor and about thirty will adorn the exhibits in the gallery. Each individual exhibitor will have the name on his car painted on two sides of one of these posts at both ends of his space, so that coming in the public will see the name of the car exhibited.

Manager Charles E. Pay of the Boston branch of the Ford Motor Company returned from Detroit yesterday, where he had been in attendance upon the annual convention of the Ford agents. Mr. Pay came back with his mind full of the effect that the convention had on the business of the Ford Motor Company. The meeting was one of the most successful ever held by the company, and the consensus of opinion was that the year 1908 would be the greatest business year in the history of the company.

W. H. Schwartz, who for the past seven years has been connected with the sales department of A. Smith & Son's piano factory, has severed his connection with that concern to accept a responsible position with the sales forces of the Thomas G. Jefferys Company.

A factory branch of the Croxton-Keeton Motor Company of Marion, Ind., has been established at No. 16 Columbus avenue. Motor Mart. L. F. Whitcomb will have charge in the local industry, having been plant in charge. This new company is a branch to Boston the latest of its products, which is a powerful, well-built car of medium high cylinder gasoline car, the one which made such an enviable record in the recent Munsey test.

DARTMOUTH'S LAST TRYOUT BEFORE GAME

HANOVER, N. H., Nov. 11.—That the Dartmouth coaches are to take no chances of being without a quarterback in the coming Harvard game was made apparent when Buck Smith, a sub halfback, was sent to in this position in the practice. Smith is a graduate of Mt. Hermon Academy and while there started as quarterback. He has a thorough knowledge of the game and should work well in that position. He is probably the fastest man on the squad, his weight alone having prevented his being a first string man.

The line men are in charge of Coach Hillard and Joe Hindley. The backs and tackles to Charlie Boyle and Coach Keady has the interference by Johnny White, and ends by Jess Hawley.

The coaches are very much pleased at the out of Brady at quarter. Since the Princeton game he has improved wonderfully. Captain Tobin spent a lot of time in practice trying and the first time he is now showing marks him as a dangerous man behind the line. Swenson as a drop kicker was never in better form, and it is said he will be used in this department during the Harvard game is now certain. Marks is also showing up well and a drop kicker. The final performance of the season will be given Saturday when every man on the squad will be given a chance to show what he can do against the second team. The varsity will probably be lined up as follows: Boles and Barker, ends; Sherwin and Long, tackles; Tobin and Farnum, guards; Needham, centre; Brady and Smith, quarterbacks; Marks, fullback; Ryan, Smith and Dudley, halfbacks.

YALE NEGLECTS LINE PLUNGING IN FAVOR OF FORWARD PASS

By CHARLES CHADWICK.

For Four Years Guard and Tackle at Yale.

Eli Backfield Good.

Yale's backfield is the kind that is necessary in the modern game. It consists of all-round good punters, line plungers and broken field runners. This last is their forte. Steve Philbin is the bright particular star of this group of stars. His running is a broken field in the Brown game last Saturday, dodging both the Brown team and the side line along which he was running, is the best thing of the kind that has been seen at New Haven in the days of the Brink Thorpe. Coy weighs 195 pounds, the same that he weighed last year, he is faster than either Minot, the Harvard line breaker, or Hart, the great Princeton plunging back. At quarterback, Howe appears to have won the place in fast competition. He runs the team with considerable spirit and force.

The weak place in the line compared with the rest of the team, is at tackle. At guard Goebel and Andrus can outplay any other pair on the field. Cooney is about the heaviest and strongest centre rush playing to-day.

The fumbling of the team has improved lately, and is now pretty sharp and accurate. Still the coaches are working every at this late date on the rudiments of the game. The most unsatisfactory part of coaching is to polish off the team is now going on. Taken as a whole, the team is one of the best, in spite of its weak points.

DREYFUSS STRONG FOR JOHN HEYDLER

CINCINNATI, Nov. 11.—"If the election were held to-morrow and it were possible it would vote that John Heydler be made president of the National League for five years. I am for Heydler first, last and all the time. I would not line up with Charlie Murphy, and whenever you see me doing it, rush me to the nuthouse, for there must be something the matter with me."

This statement was made here by President Dreyfuss of the Pittsburg team. He also had this to say about President Ebbets. "President Ebbets of the Brooklyn Club has adopted the tactics of the politician. Heydler decided against him in a contest and now he's after Heydler's scalp."

BIG RAID BY WIRE-TAPPERS.

DENVER, Col., Nov. 11.—Denver and Salt Lake City bookmakers lost $60,000 on horse races at the Latonia track, near Cincinnati, through a cleverly executed tapping of telegraph wires near the Latonia race track. The odds on Edward Pearson, the winner of the sixth race yesterday at that track were boosted from 7 to 1 to 20 to 1, and even as high as 40 to 1.

STRAIGHT DOPE FOR SPORT FANS

THE SULLIVAN TWINS ARE TRAINING hard for their bouts, Jack for Porky Flynn at the Armory next Tuesday night and Mike for Jimmy Gardner in New Haven on November 29. The brothers are planning a trip abroad and [illegible] offers of several bouts in England and France, and likely will start soon after Mike mixes it with Gardner. Mike dropped in to see me yesterday to get the address of Butcher Howe, the well known boxer of Greater Boston, who has stopped several of the best of them before he retired on his laurels, and took to following the horses. Mike says he expects to meet some of the best men in his class, and wants the Butcher as a sparring partner on account of his experience against the top-notchers.

BY THE WAY, SPEAKING OF JIMMY Gardner reminds me that the Lowell man issued a challenge the other night to meet any middleweight in the world, Papke preferred. Why not start a little nearer home and take on Sam Langford, or Ralph Calloway, the other brunette who is making Boston his home just now. Joe Woodman tells me Sam can still make the middle weight, and it is a cinch Calloway can. There's a chance for the Armory Club to get a good bout.

WILLOUGHBY BEATS ANDERSON IN JIG TIME

Walter Willoughby, the crack Cleveland middleweight wrestler, made Carl Anderson, the Harvard wrestling instructor, look like a selling plater at the Columbia Theatre last night, winning the first fall in four minutes with a head scissors and armlock, and forcing Anderson to quit with a body scissors and armlock in the second bout at the end of eight minutes. Anderson never had a look in as he was on the defensive every minute, and Willoughby was his master at every stage of the game. The match was winner take all, and the Cleveland boy wasted no time in getting to his man.

BOSTON AMERICAN'S DOUBLE

THE LOVE CHASE

A Widow, Who Captured Four Men, Gives Her Sisters the Benefit of Her Experience in Turning Mere Men Into Husbands

By DOROTHY DIX

THE Winter season, which is the open season for husband hunting, is now open on us, and it behooves every young woman who wants a home of her own to make ready [illegible]

Now [illegible] and desires [illegible] as it can to pass along a good [illegible] has secured the services of a widow who has captured no less than four [illegible] as the prowess of her [illegible] expert advice on the best tactics to pursue in husband hunting.

For [illegible] she desires to remain [illegible] can [illegible] her [illegible] important [illegible]

"[illegible] the [illegible] that when they start out on [illegible] men are alike, and that the same weapon will bring all of them down. That is as silly a mistake as if one would go bird shooting with a fishing rod, or angling for trout with a Winchester rifle.

"That is error No. 1.

"Error No. 2 consists in woman's failure to familiarize herself with the nature and habits of the different species of men which shows as [illegible] it would to start out to hunt lions on the shores of Chesapeake Bay, or canvas back ducks in the Rocky Mountains.

"Error No. 3 is woman's fond and fatuous belief that the same line of charms appeal to every man, which is as idiotic as to think that you can use the same sort of shot and shell to bring down an elephant as a canary bird.

"The huntsman, who wishes to return with a full bag, first provides himself with the proper equipment for the chase. Then he devotes much study to the ways of the game he is pursuing and adapts himself to its peculiarities. [illegible] knows that some animals must be patiently stalked, some [illegible]

Different Kinds of Bait

"[illegible] so must a woman [illegible] love chase, for there are men who can only be captured by being stealthily crept upon; others who are so tame that they can be knocked over like a barnyard fowl; others who can be decoyed by a wooden rival into good shooting distance, and still others who will come to any good feeding place that is properly baited, where they can be easily caught as they gorge themselves.

The Theory has it that the Shy Man is hard to catch; but, with proper bait, he is the easiest

"Generally speaking, all men come under one or the other of these classifications.

"The shy man.

"The spoiled man.

"The vain man.

"The selfish man.

"The domestic man.

"Let us consider each of these in turn.

"The Shy Man is one of the most attractive animals that roams the matrimonial forest, and he is well worth capturing for many reasons. In the first place, because he is nearly always good and tender; and, in the second place, because he is of a timid nature and so much afraid of women that he very seldom roams away from home after he has once been caught and domesticated.

"In fact, there can be no lovelier household pet than a shy husband, and it is well worth any woman's time and attention to try to catch one.

"In starting out upon the pursuit of the Shy Man, however, the fair huntress should bear one thing in mind, and that is, she will scare him off if she attempts to hunt in couples. She must go alone, and creep upon him so gently that he does not perceive her approach. The best way to do this is to establish a friendship with his sisters, or some female relative, and thus, by dint of appearing naturally and innocently on his horizon, accustom him to the sight of her, without frightening him.

The Shy Man Easy to Bag

"Be very careful to show no eagerness, as a false move will startle him and put him to flight. Let the huntswoman bide her time.

"Let her become almost like a sister, with the difference that, while his sister snub him, she praises him. She exalts him. She alone makes him feel that he is a devil of a fellow, instead of being a gawky nonentity in society.

"In this way, without his knowing it, she will have him cut out of the herd, and, without his knowing it, he will be her meat.

"For the final capture, it is generally necessary to lay some shallow trap, such as for the huntress to pretend that she is going to some distant land to shoot big game, or to engage in the wholesale butcher business in Chicago. Tears are also a good bait, but almost any old thing will do, as the Shy Man is extremely near-sighted where women are concerned and never fails to blunder into the pit that has been digged for him.

"Once he is in, the huntress will have to help him out because he would [illegible] to death on his [illegible] were left to propose unaided. So after the first preliminary flounder at love making, a compassionate huntress should give him her hand. This will fill him with such gratitude that he will follow her like a dog the balance of his life.

"The best weapons to use in chasing down the Shy Man are a pair of gummed shoes, a thirty-two calibre smile and a long range patience. Always use smokeless powder that does not rub off when you pillow your head on a black coat."

So said the Widow.

His Advice on Marriage

Given When the Bill Clerk Promises Not to Follow It

By KENNETT HARRIS

"WHAT do you think about a young man marrying?" asked the bill clerk.

"I think it's either the very best thing that he can do for himself in every way, or that it's a fatal mistake and one that he will regret to the last day of his life" [illegible] ways and means. In reality, there is no reason for hesitation. All that is required is a little nerve at the outset to take the plunge.

"I know that there used to be a prejudice in favor of acquiring a little nest-egg for a rainy day before embarking on the sea of matrimony, but just think how long you would have to wait yourself, if that was a rule you had to follow. Why, Johnny, the probability is that you would never marry."

"Then remember, it isn't the man who gets the worst of it"

replied the cashier. "Speaking broadly and briefly, them is my sentiments."

"Thanks," said the bill clerk. "You've got the information bureaus tied to the stake and screaming for mercy. They ought to bind you in half calf and put you away in a sectional bookcase."

"There's no half calf about you, Johnny," retorted the cashier. "Nor yet three-quarters, although three-quarters is nearer the fact. Why do you wish to know my opinion on the subject of matrimony?"

"So I can do the opposite to what you think is the right thing," answered the bill clerk. "I've come out ahead of the game more than once by getting your advice and then not following it."

"In that case, I should advise you to get married by all means," said the cashier. "I wouldn't waste another week in the single state if I were you.

"Get a girl, if you haven't one already, and [illegible] a goood looking young woman will do. As long as she is pleasing to the eye and knows what kind of clothes to put on herself, you can [illegible]

"The kind of preacher is also immaterial. He may be an Episcopalian, Baptist, Methodist, Seventh Day Adventist or any thing else, providing that he doesn't ask for his fee in advance."

"Count on the Trousseau"

"I wouldn't need any money to keep house, of course," said the bill clerk.

"Why, [illegible] cashier. "What would you want money for? You can get all the furniture you need from an installment house and pay for it at your leisure, and you must be a poor business man if you can't [illegible] a line of credit for your groceries.

"In all probability your wife will come to you with a trousseau that ought to last her for a few years, or until she begins divorce proceedings. Husbands find it quite unnecessary to buy clothes for their wives."

"I see you're posted," said the bill clerk.

"You are right," said the cashier. "I am. Marriage is often looked upon as a momentous step in life. Young men are apt to hesitate and spend a great deal of time figuring ways and means.

"I'll pay you your two dollars, all right," said the bill clerk. "You needn't worry about that."

"It's Money in Your Pocket"

"I'm not worrying, dear boy," said the cashier. "I know you'll pay me. I've not the least doubt about it. I'll see that you do, I promise you that. If you happen to forget about it when pay day comes, I'll remind you. You won't even have to tie a string around your finger.

"But I was not referring to that little matter. I was speaking of the holy and happy state of matrimony. I was saying that you needn't think it necessary to have money laid by, or your debts paid, or a home of your own to bring your blushing bride to. That's all nonsense. If you have money in the bank, what's to prevent the bank from smashing up? And in your debts are all paid, who is going to take any interest in your welfare?"

"As far as owning a house is concerned, I own mine, and I often think it would be far cheaper to agree to pay rent. Why, certainly you ought to get married."

"It isn't expensive, the way you figure it out," admitted the bill clerk.

"It's money in your pocket," said the cashier. "Tell me how you stand to lose at any stage of the game? You might find a girl with a good, paying job, for that matter. She won't have to quit just because she's got a husband. If anybody quits working, let it be you. Anyway, it's not a bad thing to have ten or fifteen dollars a week easy money.

"Don't Follow My Advice"

"Of course if there are any additions to the family, it will make some difference. But even then, you aren't the one who will get the worst of it.

"If the house gets to be uncomfortable, there are lots of places outside where a man can have a good time, and if the worst comes to the worst, there are trains leaving the city every few minutes and in all directions. You aren't obliged to stay unless you want to.

"As far as the girl is concerned, she knew what chances she was taking when she married you, or if she didn't, she ought to have. She hasn't got anybody to blame but herself even if she has lost her health and her youth and her good looks and her good paying job and her fascinating husband.

"You certainly ought not to hesitate on her account. She's the one that wants to do the hesitating."

"You advise me to jump right in and marry then?" said the bill clerk.

"I certainly do, with all my heart and soul," replied the cashier. "I advise you to do so at once and with an eye single to your own welfare and that of the young woman. That is, if you're quite sure you won't follow my advice."

HITTING BACK

Mistress (angrily)—How dare you talk back to me in that way? I never saw such impudence. You have a lot of nerve to call yourself a lady's maid.

New Maid—I don't call myself that now, ma'am; but I was a lady's maid before I got this job.

NO HOPE FOR HIM

"That young clerk of yours will never grow up to be much of a druggist."

"Why not?"

"I came in here yesterday and asked for 25 cents' worth of goose grease, and he didn't try to get me to buy something else that was just as good."

Human Fat Reduces Easily in This Climate

Now is the time above all others when you should be thinking of removing that dragging down false flesh. It is very simple if you know how to do it. Marmola Tablets, especially prepared so that they may be carried in the purse or the vest pocket, will reduce your flesh at the rate of from 12 to 15 ounces a day and you can eat when and what you will. Diet and exercise have been proven to be no sure relief to the fat people. The question is not one of eating but of digesting properly that which you eat. Just take a Marmola Tablet after each meal and you need not fear anything you eat; it won't make fat. The digestive juices are wrong. What they should do is to give you good, strong active blood, bone and tissue and serve to replenish the waste [illegible] They are sold at [illegible] first-class drug stores, or you may write The Marmola Co., [illegible] Detroit, Mich., and enclose the price of a case, 75 cts, and they will send same to you at once.

HOW TO ESCAPE WINTER COLDS

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

I HAVE just gotten over a cold, the kind of cold that makes life miserable for yourself and a burden to your friends, and causes your family to regard you with mingled sympathy and irritation.

"Must you sneeze so often?" said my best friend. "That makes the twentieth one in ten minutes."

"Yes," I said meekly, "I must."

I was meek because I knew the cold was my own fault. I had gone out on a cold day wearing silk stockings and the thinnest of slippers. So now I paid the penalty of my vanity.

As I lay there sneezing and shivering I said to myself, "I think it's about time to talk to my girls about the Winter outfits, so here goes, little sisters.

In the first place, don't wear thin shoes and stockings. It's only people who can afford automobiles and cabs that can afford silk stockings and low shoes in cold weather. We who have to work must wear sensible footwear.

English women are noted for their beautiful, rosy complexions, and the reason is that they dress warmly.

Dress Sensibly

All English houses are cold. The temperature never gets above 66 degrees, but the people dress warmly, so they can stand plenty of fresh air.

From the middle of November until the first of April you should wear underflannels. They need not be of wool. A light-weight cotton will do, for even that is a wonderful protection against cold.

Our Boston winds are bitterly cold and penetrating, sweeping in as they do from the sea. Don't spend your money on useless finery, but do wear a coat that is warm enough to keep out the damp wind.

A hat with feathers is very fine, but it won't add much to your appearance if your nose is red and your eyes watering with tears caused by a cold in your head.

I know of nothing so unbecoming and unromantic as a cold in the head.

If you invest in a pair of good boots with cork soles you will never have wet feet.

The time when you are most liable to catch cold is when tired out after a hard day's work; you go out from a hot office into the cold air.

You may have the misfortune to be in the [illegible] room with the kind of hot house plant who vows she can't stand the windows up. If that is so I am sorry for you, and the only thing to do is open wide all the windows every time she leaves the room.

All offices are overheated, and should be thoroughly aired several times during the day.

The more fresh air you breathe, the less liable you are to take cold.

Remember, girls, that a neglected cold at this time of the year may prove a very serious thing and impair your health for the whole Winter.

Fresh Air a Preventive

The quickest way to cure a cold is to starve it, eat as lightly as possible and drink a great deal of water. When you feel the cold coming on, buy an ounce of eucalyptus, pour a little on a small piece of cotton wool and swab out the nostrils thoroughly. It is a great disinfectant. Always swallow a few drops on a teaspoonful of sugar.

But if you dress properly and get enough fresh air there is no reason why you should catch cold.

"Boston women simply don't know how to dress in cold weather," said a man to me last Winter. "Just look at that foolish girl crossing the street," and he pointed out a girl who wore silk stockings and low shoes, though the wind was blowing a gale and the snow lay in piles everywhere.

So, dears, this is just a word of warning. Keep your health, your good looks and your youth while you can by taking care of yourselves and spending your money on comfortable, sensible clothing rather than on foolish fripperies.

As for the men, they think far more of your pink cheeks than of your flower decked hats. And, after all, it's just as well to please them, seeing you are going to marry them, isn't it?

Through the Wall

THE man smiled at Martinez's inordinate vanity over his supposed fascination for women. He was convinced that no member of the fair sex could resist his advances.

With so much in mind, Coquenil started up the Champs Elysees about 5 o'clock.

Mrs. Wilmott, very languid and stunning, amid her imposing surroundings, received M. Paul with the patronizing indifference that bored rich women extend to trades people, but presently when he explained that he was a detective and began to question her about the Ansonia affair she rose with a haughty gesture that was meant to banish him in confusion from her presence. Coquenil, however, did not "banish" so easily, he had dealt with haughty ladies before.

"My dear madam, please sit down," he said quietly. "I must ask you to explain how it happens that a number of five pound notes given to you by your husband some days ago were found on the body of this murdered man."

"How do I know?" she replied. "I spent the notes in shops, and I'm not responsible for what became of them. Besides, I am dining out to-night, and I must dress. I really don't see any point to this conversation."

"It's False!" She Said

"No;" he smiled and the keenness of his glance pierced her like a blade. "The point is, my dear lady, that I want you to tell me what you were doing with this billiard player when he was shot last Saturday night."

"It's false, I never knew the man," she cried. "It's an outrage for you to intrude on a lady and—and insult her."

"You used to back his game at the Olympia," continued Coquenil, coldly.

"What of it? I'm fond of billiards. Is that a crime?"

"You left your cloak and a small leather bag in the vestiaire at the Ansonia," pursued M. Paul.

"It isn't true."

"Your name was found stamped in gold letters under a leather flap in the bag."

She shot a frightened glance at him and then faltered. "It—it was?"

Coquenil nodded. "Your friend, M. Kittredge, tore the flap out of the bag and then cut it into small pieces and scattered the pieces from his cab through dark streets, but I picked up the pieces."

"You—you did?" she stammered.

"Yes. Now, what were you doing with Martinez in that room?"

For some moments she did not answer, but studied him with frightened, puzzled eyes. Then suddenly her whole manner changed.

"Excuse me," she smiled, "I didn't get your name."

"M. Coquenil," he said.

"Won't you sit over here. This chair is more comfortable. That's right. Now I will tell you exactly what happened." And, settling herself near him, Pussy Wilmott entered bravely upon the hardest half hour of her life. After all, he was a man, and she would do the best she could.

"You see, M. Coquenil, I beg your pardon, M. Coquenil. The names are alike, aren't they?"

"Yes," said the other, dryly.

In the Private Room

"Well," she went on quite charmingly, "I have done some foolish things in my life, but this is the most foolish. I did give Martinez the five pound notes. You see he was to play a match this week with a Russian, and he offered to lay the money for me. He said he could get good odds and he was sure to win."

"But the dinner? The private room?"

She shrugged her shoulders. "I went there for a perfectly proper reason. I needed some one to help me, and I—I couldn't ask a man who knew me so"——

"Then Martinez didn't know you?"

"Of course not. He was foolish enough to think himself in love with me, and—well, I found it convenient and—amusing—to—utilize him."

"For what?"

Mrs. Wilmott bit her red lips and then, with some dignity, replied that she did not see what bearing her purpose had on the case, since it had not been accomplished.

"Why wasn't it accomplished?" he asked.

"Because the man was shot."

"Who shot him?"

"I don't know."

"You have no idea?"

"No idea."

"But you were present in the room?"

"Yes."

"You heard the shot? You saw him fall?"

"Yes, but——"

"Well?"

Now her agitation increased. She seemed about to make some statement, but checked herself and simply insisted that she knew nothing about the shooting.

No one had entered the room except herself and Martinez and the waiter who served them. They had finished the soup and Martinez had left his seat for a moment. He was standing near her when the shot was fired and he fell to the floor. She had no idea where the shot came from or who fired it. She was frightened and hurried away from the hotel. That was all.

Coquenil smiled indulgently. "What did you do with the auger?" he asked.

"The auger?" she gasped.

"Yes, the cab driver you took when you slipped out of the hotel in the telephone girl's raincoat——"

"You know that?"

Threw It in the Seine

He nodded and went on: "This cab driver remembers that you had something under your arm wrapped in a newspaper. Was that the auger?"

"Yes," she answered weakly.

"And you threw it into the Seine as you crossed the Concorde bridge?"

She stared at him and then burst out into genuine admiration. "Mon Dieu, you're the cleverest man I ever met!"

M. Paul bowed politely and, glancing at a well spread tea table he said:

"Mrs. Wilmott, if you think that perhaps you won't mind giving me a cup of tea. The fact is, I have been so busy [illegible] forgot to eat and I feel a little faint." He pressed a hand [illegible] forehead and Pussy saw that he was very white.

"You poor man!" she cried in concern. "Why didn't you tell me sooner. I'll fix it myself. There! Take some of these toasted muffins! What an extraordinary life you must lead! I can almost forgive you for being so outrageous because you're so interesting."

She let her siren eyes shine on him in a way that had wrought the discomfiture of many a man.

M. Paul smiled. "I can return the compliment by saying that it isn't every lady who could throw a clumsy thing like an auger from a moving cab over a wide road way and a stone wall and land it in a river. I suppose you threw it over on the right-hand side?"

"Yes."

"How far across the bridge had you got when you threw it? This may help the divers."

She thought a moment. "We were a little more than half way across. I should say."

"Thanks. Now, who bought this auger?"

"Martinez."

"Did you suggest the holes through the wall?"

"No, he did."

"Are you sure?"

"Quite sure."

"But the holes were bored for you?"

"Of course."

"Because you wanted to see into the next room?"

"Yes," in a low tone.

"And why?"

She hesitated a moment and then burst out in a flash of feeling: "Because I knew that a wretched dancing girl was going to be there with——"

"Yes?" eagerly.

"With my husband!"

CHAPTER XV.

Pussy Wilmott's Confession.

"THEN your husband was the person you thought guilty that night?" questioned Coquenil.

"Yes."

"You told M. Kittredge when you called for him in the cab that you thought your husband guilty?"

"Yes, but afterwards I changed my mind. My husband had nothing to do with it. If he had, do you suppose I would have told you this? No doubt he has misconducted himself with that woman, but"——

"You mean Anita?"

It was a chance shot, but it went true. She stared at him in amazement. "I believe you are the devil," she said, and the detective muttered to himself. "The tall blond! Of course!"

"There's one thing that doesn't seem very clever, though," reflected the detective. "Didn't Martinez think your husband or Anita would see those holes in the wall?"

"No, because he had prepared for that. There was a tall palm in Number Seven that stood just before the holes and screened them."

Look Through the Hole

Coquenil looked at her curiously. "How do you know there was?"

"Martinez told me, he had taken the precaution to look in there on Friday when he engaged Number Six. He knew exactly where to bore the holes."

"I see. And he put them behind the curtain hangings so that your waiter wouldn't see them?"

"That's it."

"And you held the curtain hangings back while he used the auger?"

"Yes. You managed it very well."

"Very well except for one thing," mused Coquenil, "there wasn't any palm in Number Seven."

"No?"

"No."

"That's strange."

"Yes, it is strange," and again she felt that he was following a separate train of thought.

"Did you look through the holes at all?" he asked.

"No, I hadn't time."

"Did Martinez look through the first hole after it was bored?"

"Yes, but he couldn't see anything, as Number Seven was dark."

"Then you have absolutely no idea who fired the shot?"

"Absolutely none."

"Except you think it wasn't your husband?"

"I know it wasn't my husband."

"How do you know that?"

"Because I asked him. Ah, you needn't smile, I made him give me proof. When I got home that night I had a horrible feeling that Addison must have done it. Who else could have done it, since he engaged Number Seven? So I waited until he came home. It was after twelve. I could hear him moving about in his room, and I was afraid to speak to him, the thing seemed so awful; but at last, I went in and asked him where he had been.

(To Be Continued To-morrow.)

SHE DID NOT CARE

SHE told me that she did not care,
But tears were trembling in her eyes;
She got another's ring to wear;
She told me that she did not care;
Oh, she had beauty that was rare!
For gold she broke the tender ties;
She told me that she did not care,
But tears were trembling in her eyes.

Polydore and the Ghost

The Palmist's Science Reveals the Truth of Things

By IRVING R. BACON

IT doesn't fall to the lot of everyone to shake hands with a ghost. In fact, most people would probably "pass up" the privilege. But, as has been stated repeatedly, Professor Polydore, while anything but foolhardy, was one of the stoutest-hearted men alive.

And, therefore, when his dead great granduncle Jim approached him and greeted him with a hoarse, sepulchral, "Polydore, my boy, I'm proud of you," the professor reciprocated with a cheery "Same here, Uncle Jim, even though this is the first time in my life I've ever had the pleasure of learning that I had so distinguished a relative."

His Uncle a Gay Dog

The occasion of this remarkable interview was a spiritualistic seance at the house of Mme. Mariposa, the celebrated medium, who recently arrived from Paris.

She was bidding fair to repeat in New York the sensational psychic successes with which she had created such a furore in the French capital. And, on the night in question, when the unexpected meeting took place between Polydore and his great granduncle, many of the most illustrious members of the "400" were present. Faintly outlined on the black background of darkness the fitfully appearing and disappearing face of the phantom left no doubt that Polydore's great-granduncle, Jim, must have been a jolly old roysterer in his day. For all the pallor of the countenance, it lacked but a red tinge on the nose to give it the aspect of a drunken pirate.

Mme. Mariposa announced that the visitant from the "other shore" bore an important message.

"Permit me to hold your hand while you are delivering the message, good old uncle," said Polydore. The accommodating ghost complied with this request [illegible] said:

"My message to all here is that you must cast aside your unbelief. Ingersoll bids me to tell you that the spirit life is real and that you must not doubt his word."

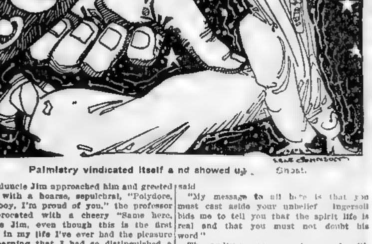
The audience, properly impressed with the importance of this message, were not a little taken aback to hear Polydore's voice interrupt the stillness to this effect.

"Uncle, your cold, clammy hand is small and the fingers and thumb have square tips, and the little finger is badly twisted.

"Moreover, I can feel the head line's course across the palm until it is lost in a double split on the Mount of the Moon. Which, translated into English, means that if you were not a ghost, you ought to be in the penitentiary."

The next instant the professor turned the glare of an electric pocket lamp upon the ghost, revealing the kalsomined features of as comfortably corpulent a personage as ever filled a black gown.

Mme. Mariposa came out of her fake trance long enough to go into a genuine faint.



Palmistry vindicated itself and showed up [illegible] Ghost.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

FICKLE WIDOWER.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Will you kindly help me out of a little trouble? I am a woman, twenty eight years old, and deeply in love with a widower of four years my senior. Now I am of a jealous disposition and people keep me troubled about all the time, telling me tales about him, and think I am foolish to think of him. I have kept company with him steady for four years and have been treated with every respect, but before that he would play tricks and tell falsehoods which I have overlooked. He also has a small family which some day I expect to care for. If he goes to a dance or a party he will always invite another lady whom I do not know. Is he doing right and should I take notice of what others say? He says they do not tell the truth.

YOU do not need to care what other people say, for you seem to know enough of the man's failings yourself. He certainly is not doing right to ask a stranger to parties and dances, provided you are engaged to him. He has told falsehoods and played tricks to your own knowledge, and it does not appear that he is much to be trusted. Just be easy about the whole affair for a while and let things take their course. The trouble with too many women is that they want to manage things too much. Let the man in the case do the courting and you will undoubtedly have better results. If he wants to marry you, he will, and if he doesn't, you are better off without him.

DON'T WED AGAINST LOVE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I, a girl of eighteen, have two suitors, one of whom I adore, and he also loves me, while the other my uncle wants me to marry because he is rich. I do not love this other man, my dear Miss Fairfax. The former has asked me to elope with him, because he knows he could never win over my relatives. If I do not elope with my sweetheart my uncle will make me marry this other man. Please tell me what I shall do. H. A.

BY no means marry a man you do not love, money or no money. Also let me caution you about too hasty action in such an important matter. If the young man you love is built of the right stuff he will find a way to win the respect of your relatives. In such trying circumstances I should advise delay. The young man you love is surely willing to wait for you, and by a little ingenuity you can delay any marriage with this other wealthy man, and who knows what the future will offer. Perhaps in a short while the wealthy young man will tire of waiting, and then the field will be clear for the man you love. Delay, my young friend, delay. But, above all, don't marry against your love.

Try This for a Severe Cough.

Take a pint of Granulated Sugar, add ½ pint of warm water and stir about 2 minutes. Put 2½ oz. of Pinex in a pint bottle and fill up with the Granulated Sugar Syrup. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours. The taste is pleasant.

The prompt results from this simple home-made article will surprise you. It usually conquers a deep-seated cough in 24 hours, and is a splendid household remedy for hoarseness, whooping cough, colds, chest pains, bronchitis, etc.

The recipe above given makes a full pint—enough to last a family a long time—and costs only 54 cents. It keeps perfectly, and is easily prepared in five minutes. Children take it willingly.

Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway White Pine Extract. It is rich in all the well known pine elements which are so healing to membranes.

None of the weaker pine preparations can compare with the real Pinex itself. All druggists have it, or will get it for you if requested.

Strained honey can be used instead of the syrup, and makes a very fine honey and pine tar cough syrup.

Calendars of Society Filled to Overflowing With Select Affairs

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

Now in the world the fair young twigs of the exclusive set are to wedge in all the dances scheduled, along with the opera, the receptions, dinners and various other affairs is causing many a pretty brow to pucker in perplexed annoyance as day after day the pretty little calendar adorning milady's desk is gone over, revised, jammed with more affairs and at last thrown aside as a hopeless proposition.

Of course the opera being a new thing here, and giving such excellent opportunity for the display of all the new gowns as well as for the delightful dinners and suppers which are becoming so popular—not as the fashionable hostelries but at the private homes—I'm afraid that the dances will have to suffer else begin later as the pleasure seekers may take in both.

Pretty Margaret Richardson who is being introduced this afternoon at a tea given in her honor by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Minard Richardson at their home on Brattle street, Cambridge, is here to be given a dance.

Then there comes the fashionable subscription dances the first of which is Friday, January 14, and the patronesses for which are Mrs. J. Randolph Coolidge, Jr., Mrs. Robert H. Gardiner, Mrs. Henry S. Hunnewell, Mrs. William S. Patten, Mrs. Endicott Peabody, Jr., Mrs. John E. Thayer, Mrs. Frederick L. W. Richardson, Mrs. Henry Parkman and Mrs. Samuel D. Warren.

The dances this year will be given as they were last, at the Somerset. Then come the Cinderella dances which will occur as last year on the Tuesdays preceding the assemblies. The assemblies, as always, take first place in importance among the balls of the year.

Then there are the six subscription dances to be given at the Tuileries on Friday evenings, November 26, December 10, January 7 and 21, February 18 and March 4, from 8:30 until 11:30 o'clock. The guests in this case are limited to the young girls not yet out.

The patronesses are Mrs. Henry S. Hunnewell, Mrs. John Lowell and Mrs. Philip Saltonstall, Mrs. C. Minot Weld. And tomorrow night, the first of the smart Brattle Hall dances in Cambridge.

Then comes Mrs. Ayer's dance for Miss Elizabeth Ayer on the seventeenth of the month and Mr. Amory's on the thirtieth for Miss Katherine Amory.

Miss Josephine Whitney, who is being introduced by her mother, Mrs. Henry M. Whitney, at a tea this afternoon, will also have several dances given for her later in the season. The Whitneys are now occupying the George von L. Meyer house on Beacon street.

Besides the dinner to-day given to-day by Mrs. Richardson and Mrs. Whitney, Mrs. Henry Parkman is also giving a tea this afternoon, at which she will present her daughter, Miss Mary Parkman. The hospitality takes place at the Richardson home on Commonwealth avenue.

Boston is much interested in the debutante tea which Mr. and Mrs. Sydney Hutchinson, who have just returned to their Philadelphia home from their Summer place at Beverly Farms, are giving today to present their daughter, Miss Cinita Hutchinson.

Miss Hutchinson, who spent last year in Europe completing her studies, returned last Spring just in time to come with her family to the North Shore, where she was quite a leader in the smart younger set.

To-day is the wedding day of Miss Eleanor Sargent Snaith and Arthur Goddard at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard W. Smith, in Marlboro street. The young couple will be at home early in the new year in Brookline, N. Y.

A number of Boston people were in New York yesterday to attend the wedding of Otis Norton Shepard, son of H. B. Shepard of this city, to Miss Gladys Peck, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Gordon Peck of Sanscostie. The wedding took place in the afternoon in the First Presbyterian Church.

Mr. and Mrs. David Lydig now in Arosia have closed their Berkshire country place, Tilatidon, which is near Lenox, and have gone to New York where they will probably spend the Winter. Mrs. Lydig is a relative of Mrs. Andrew Robeson Sargent (Miss Maria Du Acosta) who is to make her home in Brookline on her return from an extended wedding trip.

While their new house is being finished ready for their occupancy this Winter, they will spend some time with Mr. Sargent's parents, Professor and Mrs. Charles S. Sargent of Brookline.

Mrs. Fanny Merrill will sail for Europe on the Canopic about the middle of the month and she has decided to remain abroad for an indefinite period. She will, however, pass the entire Winter in Italy. Mrs. Merrill has been staying at the Hotel Bellevue since her return from a visit to her brother, William Cary at Chevelly, his attractive country house in West Medford.

Among the late arrivals at Hot Springs, Virginia, are a number of newly married couples. Mr. and Mrs. Edward C. Wheelock (Mary Adams) are spending part of their honeymoon there. Mrs. Wheelock is a member of the Vincent Club and a well known belle of the Thanksgiving season. Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Hoven of Brookline arrived at the Virginia resort yesterday and will probably spend the rest of the Autumn there.

Mrs. Manning and her daughter, Miss Manning, the mother and sister of Mrs. George A. Gordon of Boylston street, have been stopping at the Westminster Hotel in Copley Square since their return from a long season at Kennebunkport, where they and the Gordons usually spend their Summers. Mrs. G. Manning and her daughter have already taken an apartment on Hayden street, to be near as possible the Gordons. Last year, and indeed for a number of years, they have had a house on Beacon street in Brookline.

Next Monday afternoon is the date selected by Mrs. Grace Hall Wainright for the presentation of her daughter, Miss Virginia Wainwright. The Wainwright home is on Commonwealth avenue and the reception and tea will be given there.

This afternoon a reception is given at Copley Hall by the Women's Charity Club, which opens the Colonial season. Among those who receive with the president, Mrs. Esther F. Boland, are Mrs. Curtis Guild, Jr., Mrs. Mary A. Chapman, Mrs. A. M. Granger, Mrs. Theodore Chase, Mrs. George A. Hibbard and Miss Walter Foss.

Two interesting social affairs of the coming week, which are just now engaging the attention of the younger set, are the reception which Miss Madeleine C. Mixter or No. 241 Marlboro street is to give for her debutante niece and namesake, Miss Madeline Mixter, and the luncheon party which Mrs. Edmund M. Wheelwright of No. 135 Beacon street has planned to give in her honor.

Miss Mixter is the daughter of Mrs. Randolph Morgan Appleton (Helen K. Mixter). Her aunt's reception in her honor will be given on Thursday, November 18, and the luncheon by Mrs. Wheelwright comes on Friday, the day following.

S. S. Spaulding, who has a farm in Colnasset and has been spending part of the Autumn there, is in New York this week attending the horse show. The Spaulding have a Summer home on Jewell road and have spent the greater part of the season there.

Their son, Eugene Gerry Spaulding, and his bride of a little more than a week are spending part of their honeymoon at the Homestead in Hot Springs, Virginia.

Their wedding took place in Albany and was attended by a number of their relatives and friends from here.

YOUR THANKSGIVING DINNER

"Well," what do YOU want for your Thanksgiving dinner. Everybody of course wants a little turkey, but there is a wide variety of option as to what constitute the proper "fixings."

Some prefer soup. Some don't want any soup, because they think soup would take the edge of their appetite for turkey. Others hate an idea the oysters should go before the turkey. Then are many who use oysters in the dressing only.

Private chestnuts and oysters are among the viands proposed for turkey dressings. There is also a wide variety of vegetables and methods of cooking and serving.

Just read over these menus and see for yourself.

You know the AMERICAN offers $23 in prizes of $10, $5 and ten $1 for the best New England Thanksgiving turkey dinner bills of fare.

STATE STREET NEWS OF INTEREST TO INVESTORS

The one great governing factor in State Street is the money market.

$ $ $

Nothing is being overlooked in this market by careful observers. They are watching the loan account of the banks now as the inevitable corrective, no matter how long it may be postponed, of an excessive loan account in the liquidation of securities, especially when trade demands are to be met.

$ $ $

Whether we are to have a money stringency at the year end appears to depend now upon the degree of moderation exercised by the professional interests who are favorable to higher prices because of the highly prosperous and progressive industrial condition throughout the country.

$ $ $

While daily news problems seem more or less perplexing, the more conservative financiers do not expect any bull campaign at the time.

$ $ $

Although the interest rates both on call and time accommodations are higher, conditions are not wanting of improvement in the money situation, although there is room for considerable shrinkage in offsets at home, chief among them is the excess of the Bank of England in increasing its stock of gold.

$ $ $

The banking machinery of the whole world has been running a path best the last few days. All the resources of the seven hemispheres are pouring to market. Wheat, corn, cotton, pork, hay, stocks, bonds and every description of commodity are now being converted into bills of credit and cash in banks, awaiting new purchases to be made from producers to consumers. The extreme extent of the burden can not be estimated with exactness, and for that reason alone the banks are certain to show a continually stronger position for the immediate future.

$ $ $

One thing that helped the money market was the statement of Secretary Ryan, head of the Treasury that the government would probably not make any sale of securities until after the first of the year. This put to rest Taft's message in claiming some people who do not know how money is made. The policies outlined in his Western speeches are those on which the administration has been working, adding new issues to the list that should alarm Wall street. These will be presented at the next session in Congress unless the railroads anticipate the attempt through some other, but giving employers an increase in wages.

$ $ $

If it were not for the Aldrich currency law, money would be at ten and fifteen per cent right now in State street. The pressed great banks are fighting against anything higher than six per cent, because they do not want to give any one of the 7,000 banks of the United States an excuse even to apply for Aldrich money. The secretary of the treasury would probably refuse to allow any of this currency to be loaned, even if applied for, but the mere application would cause great excitement. It is time there is no legitimate excuse for using any Aldrich money yet, but there is a chance of banks dominated by speculative interests that would not hesitate to make the application if a seven or eight per cent. rate in New York could be used as a technical justification.

$ $ $

There are indications at headquarters of several of the great railroad systems of a determination to abandon the policy of reckless expansion that has been so pronounced in recent years. The Harriman system seems to have reached the limit of its ambition for territory, and will now begin developing more thoroughly the region acquired by its lines. This may check speculation temporarily in the Harriman shares, but must result in great improvement for the stocks ultimately.

$ $ $

The report of the Copper Producers Association was a disappointment. There was every reminder from high quarters previous to the issue of this report that it would show a material reduction in the surplus stocks of metal on hand. As a matter of fact, it showed an increase of these stocks amounting to above 5,000,000 pounds on the first of November, as compared with the first of October. Production is now on a high record rate. Persons responsible for these figures of increase should now say that they meant the surplus of copper had been reduced 5,000,000 pounds up to the present, the sales between producer and consumer having been at least 10,000,000 pounds in excess of the production.

$ $ $

State Street sees in the election of Mr. Hitchcock as presidency of the Boston & Maine the beginning of a movement to unite the Boston & Maine, the New Haven, the Pennsylvania and the Atchison into one system.

$ $ $

The reason for the heaviness of New York Central, in addition to it being in sympathy with the depression of stocks in Pennsylvania, is the fact that stockholders of the Vanderbilt property are selling their shares because, although the allotment of new stock has not been announced, they believe it will be larger, and the old stock will act as New Haven and Pennsylvania did when the rights were announced.

$ $ $

When Grasby directors hold their next meeting, December 7, it is not unlikely that the dividend suspended December, 1908, will be restored.

RUSSELL CLAIMANT WANTED IN COURT

A formal demand that the claimant for half of the fortune of $500,000 left by the late Daniel Russell of Melrose be ordered to come into court was made at the opening of the Russell will case hearing before Judge Lawton today in the Probate Court, East Cambridge. Judge Lawton refused to order the claimant, who says he is Daniel Blake Russell, to come into court, as he was present during the opening of the hearing, and his lawyers say he is within reach at any time.

The first witnesses to-day were Mary Arno and Elizabeth Vice, married sisters of James Russell, which those who are fighting the claimant say is his real name. It was brought out that they are being paid $5 a day while they are here.

GIBBONS ON 120 YEARS OF CHURCH

BALTIMORE, Nov. 11.—To-morrow will be the twentieth anniversary of the opening of the Catholic University in Washington. Cardinal Gibbons to-day vividly recalled the Catholic Centenary on November 10, when there gathered in Baltimore a greater number of distinguished prelates and laymen from all over the United States and elsewhere than have been seen assembled at any time in this country, if not in the world. "Twenty years has seen great changes," said the cardinal. "The Catholic church, then an important factor, but gained greatly in strength."

LOW PRICE LIST TO TEMPT PATRONS

There are a number of special inducements in wares and prices which will tempt patrons to visit MacDonnell's store, No. 86 Tremont street, to-morrow. Among the goods to which attention is called especially are black messaline waists, women's sweaters, extra large size waists, white mallne neck ruffs, black sateen petticoats, flannelette garments, hair goods and silk-finished knit underwear. Says the firm's announcement, "We are exact in our value statements," the management of this establishment says "Every statement we make is truthful."

A SUNDAY AMERICAN want advt. is often the road to fortune.

CHEVALIER IS DELAYED.

Keith's Theatre announced to-day that the engagement of Albert Chevalier had been postponed from next Monday to November 22 on account of the success of his present Chicago engagement.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

LAKE COPPER HEADS LIST

STATE STREET, Nov. 11.—Lake Copper was the local stock market feature this forenoon. Opening at 40½, which is its present price, it eased off slightly on moderate profit taking. The company's ore treated at the Franklin mill gave a high percentage of copper and this induced buying orders both from the Lake district and for local account. The run gave 50 pounds of mineral or 20.33 pounds of fine to the ton of rock treated. This is about 2 per cent. and much better than the general run of Lake Superior mines. In a steady run, however, it is not likely that this high percentage could be maintained.

There was some selling of Superior Copper which closed unchanged from 90¼ to 64½. The proceeds from these sales went into Lake Copper stock. Calumet & Hecla Consolidated was in better demand and stiffened to 575. Amalgamated and Steel Common both eased fractionally, the former losing to 88¾ and the latter to 89¼. Sugar was weak around 131 as the result of an attack by a New York paper. Erie common still eased fractionally, the former losing to 28¾ and the latter to 39¼. Reports that the Harriman lines were to be reorganized with a new company, some definite knowledge will be forthcoming in the near future, the price of any new per warrants were slightly firmer at the opening in London.

Curb business was light in volume and prices were inclined to be heavy. Tobin Copper Coalition was the low stock of the list. Big Central was irregular and Ely Consolidated ruled off to 60 cents. National Exposition advanced a few cents to 6 cents.

STOCKS SOON PROVE WEAK

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—Strong opening quotations in Wall street to-day reflected a development of buying power which began yesterday afternoon. Better feeling in the money market, mainly by reason of the Bank of England's statement showing a heavy increase in reserves, was the main cause of the early activity in the market.

Strength was short lived, however, selling of Union Pacific and steel showing a disinclination of the leaders to follow the wave brought out by advances. The entire railroad list gave evidence of pressure. Industrial trading showed a better tone. The Hill stocks were especially weak. Rock Island shares were strong and made new high records for the present movement.

American shares were higher in London. On the New York curb trading shares opened quiet but steady. Union Copper was heavy and off 1-16.

Harvard Beer Coupon No. 4

Ageing of Harvard Beer

Age is an important factor in a perfect beer, for if it is hastily fermented and improperly aged it will cause biliousness.

Every drop of Harvard Beer is at least four months old before it leaves the brewery—this is a rule from which we never deviate. This means that the beer we are brewing now will not be marketed till next March.

Many breweries are not equipped with facilities for the storing and keeping of such a large quantity of beer as this forces us to keep.

It means a large expenditure for the buildings, to say nothing of the money tied up in the stock. We believe the richness and mellowness which this four months' ageing gives Harvard Beer, together with the gain in flavor and in healthfulness, well worth the price which it costs us.

Do You Know Where You Are?

Not with Relation to Street and Number, but in the Journey of Human Existence

Copyright, 1909, by American-Journal-Examiner

Scientific men, being satisfied that the observations of a polar explorer are correct, are satisfied with his claim that he has really stood at the northern axis of the earth.

Without help no human being could be sure that he had set foot upon the spot that is farthest north. His most important aid is not supplied by dogs or Eskimos, nor by money furnished him by enthusiastic "backers." It is ready to his hand in a wonderful little instrument called the sextant, and that instrument was invented centuries ago, probably by the wonderful Isaac Newton, although other men lay claim to the same invention.

By accurately measuring the angle between the horizon and the sun, or between the horizon and a fixed star, the sextant enables the navigator to figure out his exact position on the surface of the earth.

He may keep with his compass and his log a "dead reckoning," which will tell him nearly his position. But the sweep of winds and ocean currents and the varying speed of both sail and steam vessels interfere with the accuracy of such reckoning.

Only when the sun or stars shine out after a storm and the navigating officer of a vessel with his sextant "takes the sun" is he perfectly sure of his location. Then he lays a new course, with the aid of his compass and his charts, and journeys on, confident that he is headed straight for the port for which he is bound.

Cook and Peary, assisted as they were by their contemporaries, white and Eskimo, depended still more upon men long dead, the pioneers of navigation and exploration. Newton, when he invented the sextant, had a part in the discovery of the pole. A part of equal importance was played by the inventor of the mariner's compass, whose needle, although pointing south in the Arctic regions, still serves as a guide to the north, its variations having long ago been accurately figured out for the aid of the navigator.

To do anything more in the world than aimlessly travel beaten tracks every man must spend much time exploring unknown regions of experience. The explorers of the world have made its civilization, its physical and intellectual progress.

They form a long and splendid roll of honor in history—the pioneers of thought and action, the explorers whose courage and unselfishness have given the world things of far more use than a spaceless point at the upper extremity of the earth.

New York City has lately been celebrating the discoveries of two of them—Henry Hudson, the Englishman who found the Hudson River for the Dutch nation, and Robert Fulton, the thinking, far-seeing mechanic, who harnessed the imperfect steam engine of his time to paddle wheels and paved the way for the complete conquest of all the navigable waters of the world.

Of these two men Fulton, the American, was far the greater.

Hudson was a type of the daring navigator of his time. Accident brought him to the Hudson, and when he found it he believed he had discovered the long-sought Northwest passage around the obstructing new-found continent.

No accident had any part in Robert Fulton's success. His was the victory of the man of thought, the man who sees ahead of his time. And it is doubtful if even the mammoth Mauretania would astonish him could he be brought back to view her to-day. The great inventor is always aware of the imperfection of his work, always conscious that other men, building upon what he has done, will surpass his achievements.

Ask Thomas A. Edison to give you a picture of electricity in the future, and he would make prophecies that would seem impossible to the ordinary mind.

If the Wright brothers could spare enough time from their work to forecast the future of flying, they would arouse the world to wonder and incredulity.

In this editorial we have spoken of Robert Fulton, because he, far more than Hudson, KNEW WHERE HE WAS.

Not only did he know how far he had traveled in the strange field of applied mechanics; he knew how much further men must go before the steamboat would fulfill the great destiny he had planned for it.

Hard work, deep thought and a noble optimism made Fulton's greatness. He knew his position, and in his make-up there was neither timidity to make him sensitive to the sneers of his fellow men nor hesitation to give him doubts as to the value of what he was doing.

Since the beginning of civilization great men have been charting the ways that men of the future had to travel. To-day there is no excuse for going wrong.

Whatever is your aim, it is always possible to take a daily observation—to learn whether you are making progress or standing still, whether you are going in the right or wrong direction.

By studying the lives of great men who have held to truth and to justice you can know whether or not your own course is right.

Hundreds of philosophers have studied life carefully and given the world the results of their study.

There are enough storm warnings, and lighthouses, and buoyed channels to guide any human ship safely to the port of success, provided the ship chooses to heed them.

But most important of all is knowing one's position. A thoughtful pause now and then to consider just where you are—just how far from the rocks of dissipation, the shoals of ill health, the maelstrom of dishonesty—will do more to inspire self-confidence and self-respect than the most sensational progress in possibly the wrong direction.

Such a pause would have saved the life of many a man who has died a victim to overwork. Blind recklessness as to the nature of their course has sent many a man to jail or to the insane asylum or to the grave of a suicide.

Most of us are content to take life as we find it, drifting purposely along with other men, going in the same general direction as they go, and feeling comfortably sure that a crowd cannot go far wrong.

But remember that a crowd can go wrong, and the crowd does go wrong.

The few who reach any real success go in the opposite direction from the crowd, and are usually obliged to fight it pretty hard to get anywhere at all.

Civilization is yet in a very early stage. Much is still to be discovered that we do not dream of to-day. Human happiness is far from complete,—as long as misery and poverty exist there is need for greater men than have lived in the past.

Turned loose in a splendid world, in a country free from superstition, ignorant brutality and class distinction, every young American has an opportunity to be of real benefit to his race—to help in the advance toward the destiny of humankind.

But to lift his efforts above the common level he must first be inspired with an honest purpose, and, second, stick to it, frequently taking an observation to assure himself that he is not losing ground, but is moving steadily toward the object he has set for himself.

Social Ideal of the Business Man

By CHARLES FERGUSON

THERE is a world - transforming social ideal at the heart of modern business. In Boston this ideal is particularly notable at the present time.

This ideal is to be sharply distinguished from plutocracy on the one hand, and from socialism on the other.

It is already partially realized—has, in fact, arrived at great practical power. But its full realization—carrying with it a substantial solution of our social problem—waits upon a more general understanding of the true nature of modern business.

The time is ripe for a distinct social movement, which shall consciously oppose both plutocracy and socialism and shall set itself to the accomplishment of the constructive ideas that lie half hidden in the business man's mind under such words as Capital, Credit, Contract and Corporation.

The idea of Capital is to be clearly distinguished from that of Property.

Capital is property devoted to the uses of production. That is to say, it is property transfigured by its devotion to creative uses.

According to the business man's ideal, all property should cease to exist as mere property and should be transmuted into capital. Every man's house, his clothes and his dinner should be dedicated to the creative process. No possessions should be inert; they should all live and serve the ends of progress.

Credit is the valuation of men, with reference to their creative efficiency. It measures the radius of a man's enterprise—the length that society will let him go before compelling him to prove that he is "making good."

Your ideal modern business man never thinks of himself as "spending" anything; he merely "invests" and reinvests.

He never "retires" from business; it would be death to do so.

He never "has enough"—for he is not thinking of possessions, but of accomplishments.

His ideas are not static, but dynamic. And if you would understand him you must cease to think mechanically and learn to think chemically.

Take next the word Contract, which lies at the basis of business philosophy.

Contract means mutual service—reciprocity. A contract is vitiated by fraud or duress—i. e., by any denial of human equality or any refusal to do as you would have others do to you.

The vital tissue of the new society of commerce is a delicate reticulation woven by myriads of person contracts—evolving organs and authorities.

Socialism is the proposal to substitute political election for this kind of contractual selection—in the control of the staple industries.

But contractual selection is better. It would be seen by everybody to be better, if it were not for the intrusion of political privilege into the existing system of business.

Finally, Corporation is a word that stands for the publicizing of business—the putting of an enterprise on an impersonal, a scientific basis—making it rest, not upon anybody's say-so, but upon its own intrinsic power to "deliver the goods."

Now, how practically shall we formulate these ideals of business and give them a commanding prevalence?

By creating in every community a society, an institution, to understand them and stand for them—a kind of public trust commissioned to work out a "community of interest" among all other concerns and corporations—insisting that no contract is good that is not good for all concerned, and that no business is legitimate that does not serve the public.

This kind of thing is already coming into existence in many places. In Pittsburg, for example, it is called the Civic Commission. "Boston, 1915" is the shibboleth of an institution of this sort in the New England capital.

The institution that is to realize the ideals of the man of business will perhaps come to be a kind of militant university—an association of the working intelligence of a community to advance the arts and sciences—to raise the standard of living—to make goods cheaper and men dearer.

"Didn't some idiot propose to you before our marriage?"
"Certainly."
"Then you ought to have married him."
"That just what I did."
